Allies' War Stand Shows Improvement

Encouragement is Seen in Week's Developments

The former chief of staff of the U.S. fleet says in the following review of the past week's war news that the Allied position is showing steady improvement.—EDITOR.

By REAR ADMIRAL YATES STIRLING, JR., U.S.N., RETIRED
British United Press War Analyst

The victories of Allied planes and submarines and the Russians' unyielding stand at Stalingrad have provided steady encouragement to the United Nations in the global war the past week.

On all fronts the value of air power was more clearly demonstrated. The Russian front still is the critical one. Only a few more weeks remain for Hitler to achieve his goal of seizing Stalingrad and the lower Volga before winter sets in. Even if he wins those objectives, he may not be able to muster enough troops to hold back the Russians from a winter offensive and at the same time send troops and supplies to the Middle East and western Europe.

In his speech at the sports palace opening the German winter relief campaign, Hitler was not as boastful as usual. His plans as divulged were "first to hold those positions which must be held, but where we have no intention of making attacks ourselves, and second, under all circumstances to attack where attack is necessary.

In general, this speech seemed a tacit acknowledgement of German inability to gain more than already has been achieved, which is good news for the Allies.

The general picture of the past week of war fits around these highlights:

Russian Front

At Stalingrad, Mozdok, Voronezh, Rzhev and near Novorossisk, the Nazis were on the defensive, but the Russians disputed every inch of ground. The daily communiques

Churchill is Not Commenting on Stalin Letter

LONDON, Oct. 6.—(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill declined today to discuss Britain's war relations with Russia, urging the House of Commons "not to press these matters unduly," after several members had brought up Joseph Stalin's letter to Henry C. Cassidy, chief of The Associated Press Moscow bureau, calling on the Allies to "fulfil their obligations fully and on time."

One questioner, prodding the prime minister for a discussion of both political and military aspects, suggested that any misunderstanding between Britain and Russia might have evil consequences on British war production.

Mr. Churchill, however, declined to speak extemporaneously, insisting he had nothing to add "to the carefully-weighed statement I have made on this matter."

SIGNIFICANT PERIOD

This referred specifically to an inquiry on how closely Anglo-Russian staff matters were integrated, and the prime minister added he "would strongly advise the house not to press these matters unduly at a period which is certainly significant."

Authoritative sources, meanwhile, said no official news had been received in London that the British and American ambassadors in Moscow had met to consider Stalin's letter but that such a discussion was quite possible.

Mr. Churchill's statement was greeted with cries of "Hear, hear."

His suggestion "not to press these matters unduly" was in line with his warning last week against speculation on the possible time and place of Allied offensive actions.

The first question was asked by Arthur Greenwood, Labor, and this

AT STALINGRAD

Reds Repulse Nazi Attacks

By The Canadian Press

Russian troops were officially credited with beating off a sledgehammer assault by 45,000 Germans in the 43-day-old siege of Stalingrad today, crushing 22 separate attacks, while north of the city the Red armies shifted deeper into the Nazi protective barrier.

Soviet dispatches said the Germans had failed to gain on any front in the last 24 hours.

Once again, as though to obscure its lack of success in the main Stalingrad battle theatre, Hitler's field headquarters stressed developments in the Caucasus, where a "progressive German attack" was described as wresting height after height from the Russians.

WINTER NEARING

"In Stalingrad," a Nazi communique said, "the German attack in embittered fighting has made a further advance.

"Northwest of the city, a second Soviet group was encircled."

With cold nights beginning to set in, heralding the early approach of winter, German prisoners were quoted as saying that Nazi officers and troops were becoming disturbed about the progress of the campaign.

"The Germans hurry," said the Russian government newspaper Izvestia. "They see time passing. They fear delay. They are fiercely rushing forward."

TAKE HUGE LOSSES

But instead of forcing the Russians to retreat, the invaders were pictured as sacrificing appalling numbers of men and machines.

As the battle of Titans continued into its seventh week, agitation for a second front reached a crescendo in Moscow and evoked a new warning from Prime Minister Churchill not to press matters.

"We are quite clear that no statement from His Majesty's government is called for at the present time further than those already given," Mr Churchill told parliament in London.

The war leader warned last week against speculation on the possible time and place of Allied offensive actions.

Tim Buck, 16 Others Are to Get Releases

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—(CP)—Justice Minister St. Laurent has ordered the "conditional release" from custody of Tim Buck, secretary of the Communist Party of Canada, and 16 other persons against whom detention orders were issued in June, 1940, and who surrendered to police a few days ago.

This information was made public through release to the press of a telegram sent by the Justice Minister to Premier Hepburn of Ontario.

The premier had sent telegrams to Mr. St. Laurent and Prime Minister Mackenzie King appealing for release of Buck and his associates, and for implementation of the recommendations of a special parliamentary committee that the ban on the Communist Party be lifted.

CONDITIONS NOT GIVEN

Mr. St. Laurent's telegram to Mr. Hepburn made no mention of any action in regard to the Communist Party ban, and did not say what conditions were being imposed on the group which were to be released.

His telegram, dated today, said: "Your wire of the third (Oct. 3) reached my office Saturday after I had left and I did not see it until this morning.

"In the meantime, I had received

Britain's New Tank Declared Best in World

LONDON, Oct. 6.—(CP)—Sir James Grigg, war secretary, said today that Britain has produced a new tank which a member of parliament said "is superior in performance to any other tank in use by another belligerent." The description of the tank's quality was given by R. R. Stokes who asked the war secretary the name of the new weapon.

A lineal descendant of the Churchill tank, it now is called simply "A27 (M)."

Sir James gave no details about the performance or armament of the tank and declined to comment on the suggestion of Emanuel Shinwell, Labor, that "serious defects were discovered in the Churchill tanks" in the August raid on Dieppe.

Prime Minister Churchill himself said last week they performed "not without distinction."

JAPS GETTING 'HEADACHE' FROM ALLIED BLOWS

CHUNGKING, Oct. 6.—(AP)—A Chinese government spokesman said in a summary of the Axis position today that "Japan's easy successes are drawing to an end; Nazi Germany has definitely passed the peak of her military glory and is on her decline."

This commentator said Allied successes in pushing the Japanese back in lower New Guinea are a sure sign that "the enemy is definitely getting a headache."

Two Persons Are Fined For Raising Rent

Found guilty of breaches of rental regulations under two orders of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Mrs. Vera Madill, 10039 107 street, in city police court Tuesday was fined $20 and costs or 30 days on each charge.

Mrs. Madill was found guilty of charging a rent in excess of the maximum allowed under the W.P.T.B. regulations, and also was found guilty of unlawfully dispossessing or evicting a tenant of the housing accommodation known as 10037 107 street.

This was the first case tried in Edmonton under the new "rent freezing" regulations.

Wallace Thomas, charged with raising the rent on property situated at 10616 84 avenue, was fined $10 and costs and Mrs. P. Latimer, facing a similar charge had her case adjourned until Oct. 14. Thomas raised the rent from $25 to $27.50.

Gerald O'Connor, K.C. prosecuted the cases.

THE EVIDENCE

Mrs. Madill was charged with unlawfully evicting W. J. Dunn and making a false or misleading statement in a notice to vacate. According to evidence, she had notified Mr. Jones of her intentions to take over the house for her own use. It was later revealed by officers of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board that the place had not been taken

Today's War Moves

By LOUIS F. KEEMLE
Of the British United Press War Desk

It may be a coincidence, but growing unrest in conquered Europe today came within 48 hours of Reich Marshal Hermann Goering's speech in which he assured the German people that although the others may starve this winter, the Germans will be fed at their expense.

In his callous speech Goering cast aside the Nazi cloak of pretense about Germany's attitude toward other nations in the "New Order" of a Free Europe. The subject peoples, if they had any doubt about what to expect from the German liberators, can have none now.

The speech obviously was intended to bolster German morale. The fact that it needs bolstering indi-

SYDNEY, Australia, Oct. 7. — (Wednesday)—(CP)—Australian troops have scaled the last steep grades leading to the gap through the rugged Owen Stanley mountains in southern New Guinea and there still is no sign of Japanese forces retreating toward their base at Buna, on the island's northeast coast, dispatches from the battlefront said today.

The flight of the Japanese, plus the appearance yesterday of a Japanese convoy heading northward from Buna, deepened the mystery over the enemy activity. It still was not clear whether the convoy, which was attacked by American bombers, had attempted to land reinforcements or was withdrawing enemy forces from southern New Guinea.

It was recalled, however, that the Japanese withdrew from Milne Bay, farther down the southeast of New Guinea coast, when they were confronted by overwhelming Allied odds.

By MURLIN SPENCER
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS

Australia, Oct. 6.—(CP)—American long-range B-25 bombers heavily attacked a Japanese convoy heading north from Buna yesterday, a headquarters announcement said today, raising the question whether the enemy had attempted to withdraw part of his forces or to land reinforcements for the hard-pressed troops falling back in the Owen Stanley mountains.

The attack upon the convoy, including two destroyers and a large transport, came as the unopposed Allied advance across the Papuan Peninsula continued through its eighth consecutive day. The Japanese vessels apparently had slipped into Buna under cover of darkness and results of the air attack were not observed.

A C.B.S. correspondent broadcast from Australia Tuesday said the entire future of operations in northern New Guinea, where the Japanese have footholds at Lae and Salamaua, may depend on the answer to whether the Japanese were attempting to land reinforcements or to remove their troops from the Buna area.

3 Participants In Injection Plot Get Sentences

QUEBEC, Oct. 6.—(CP)—Three soldiers who participated in an injection scheme to make themselves unfit for military service have been sentenced by a district court martial sitting here, it was announced today by military officials.

Pte. A. Hince was sentenced to two years less one day. Pte. L. Greffard was sentenced to 18 months, while Pte. G. Laroche was given one year in jail. Hince was sentenced for rendering himself unfit for military service by a knee injection, while the other two were convicted of permitting Hince to give them injections.

Foreign Trade Aids Keeping Living Plane

"We cannot be too much on our guard against the spread in this country of economic nationalism and isolationism, no matter under what guise it may appear," Hon. James MacKinnon, minister of trade and commerce declared on his arrival here Tuesday morning to spend two weeks looking over the economic and war situation in Alberta.

He said it would be extremely short-sighted for Canadians to deceive themselves that drastic wartime adjustments in the character of international trade had not adversely affected Canadian living standards to a very substantial extent.

"If there is one thing more than another that we in Canada have been taught by this world war, it is the very considerable extent to which we as Canadians are assisted by our foreign trade in the maintenance of a proper standard of living," Mr. MacKinnon said. "In the matter of certain imported dried and fresh fruits, of tea, coffee, sugar, natural rubber, oil and a long list of other products we have all felt the impact of enemy action upon Canada's imports. In the field of exports we have seen our own products such as wheat, barred for the same reason from great potential overseas markets.

OBVIOUS LESSON

"In spite of this obvious lesson certain elements in Canada are today endeavoring to convince the people that they can live quite well even if nothing whatever is imported into this country. This doctrine of self-sufficiency is extremely dangerous to Canada's economy, even in time of war. It will be even more menacing to Canada's position when peace comes. It represents a type of thinking which, if it becomes popular among Canadians, will undermine this Dominion's whole economy and will prevent Canada from sharing in the advan-

Many Areas Placed Under Martial Law

By JOHN A. PARRIS

LONDON, Oct. 6—(BUP)—Advices reaching London today said German occupation authorities had ordered an invasion alert along the entire Norwegian coast, proclaimed martial law and rushed reinforcements to the Trondheim area in order to prevent revolt.

Information reaching the Norwegian government here said the Germans had taken emergency measures after the discovery of large-scale sabotage plans which threatened to wreck the Nazi supply system.

The Germans warned the native Norwegians: "Disobedience will be crushed with all force," a Norwegian radio spokesman said.

Mass arrests were said to have been started in an effort to ferret out the leaders of the Norwegian saboteurs. During the last 10 days, widespread sabotage of troop and supply trains and of railway and coastal transport has been reported.

TROUBLE IN DENMARK

The Nazis were having difficulties in Denmark, too. There the parliament met to discuss a dangerous crisis in Danish-German relations and advices from neutral Stockholm said the Danes fearfully awaited the developments of the next few days. There were indications that the Germans were preparing to impose a harsh regime.

The situation appeared most serious in Norway. Steel-helmeted S.S. troops were patrolling Trondheim's streets with fixed bayonets, a Norwegian government spokesman said. Heavy guards were placed on all German transport trains.

Trondheim and 10 other large districts were under martial law, beginning at 5 a.m. today.

HITLER MISSES GREATEST CHANCE AGAINST ALLIES

Today Marks End of "The Gravest 80 Days of the War"

By JOE ALEX MORRIS
British United Press Foreign Editor

LONDON, Oct. 6—(BUP)—Today marked the end of "the gravest 80 days of the war" and it appeared that Adolf Hitler had missed his greatest chance to strike against the United Nations while their offensive preparations still were immature.

The 80-day danger period was fixed by Oliver Lyttleton, the British minister of production, who said last July 18 that "the 80 days ahead of us will be some of the gravest ever faced."

Many informed sources believed the Allies had emerged from the dark period with a success greater than had been thought possible. Not only had any decisive victory by Hitler been balked but vast preparations had been made to strike back at the Axis.

OBVIOUS IMPLICATION

The obvious implication of Lyttleton's statement was that the 80 days had been spent in racing ahead with offensive plans while holding the Axis at bay in Russia, Egypt and the Orient.

Did Lyttleton—a careful, informed man—mean that after 80 days Hitler not only would have lost his chance for the year, but that the Allies would have achieved a basis which would swing the balance of the war?

The general impression in Britain is that Lyttleton meant that if the 80 days passed without disaster the United Nations—largely due to Russia's resistance—would be over the biggest hump on the long, bitter road back from the defensive to the offensive.

ADDED STATEMENT

On Sept. 16 Lyttleton supplemented his 80-days statement by another:

"We are approaching the breathless moment when, if Russia can hold on in her present position for a few weeks more, the balance will begin to swing in our direction."

Warnings from Prime Minister Winston Churchill and others have put a lid on all speculation of offensive operations at any specific time or place.

But J. L. Garvin, the redoubtable expert of the Sunday Express, says "There is a general instinct, right or wrong, that something is brewing on the side of the western powers. More signs of the spirit of great action are evident.

"YEAR OF YEARS"

"Nothing changes the judgment everywhere that 1942 is the year of years. . . . An Anglo-American offensive can turn the scales with mass bombing plus a second front. That is why Lyttleton's estimate of the coming new phase of the war either means powerful intervention or it means nothing."

However, it is obvious that we still are not gaining rapidly enough against the Nazis. That is emphasized by please from all fighting fronts for more planes, more tanks, more men. And the golden opportunity to take advantage of the Red army's historic resistance by striking at Germany still is going begging.

But from the broad viewpoint it is obvious that the Allies have made long range gains of sufficient consequence to begin to force Axis propaganda onto the defensive. And it may be that the time for the counterblow has been advanced by these gains.

HITLER HAS FAILED

Some sources who were mostly gloomy only two months ago now feel that the situation has unexpectedly improved, particularly in the Atlantic where convoys are coming through despite Hitler's orders to his massed submarines and planes to strike as hard as possible regardless of cost.

It is no military secret that the past 80 days represented Hitler's greatest chance to strike at Allied offensive preparations before they could get well under way.

It is also no secret that Hitler has failed, just as he has failed in the blackened ruins of Russia's steel city.

That double failure represents much more than a mere period of survival for the Allies; it may prove to have been the decisive period in the long, hard road toward victory.

MEN GO BACK TO SCHOOL

Former Bulletin Reporter Assisting in Educational Plan for Overseas Troops

By CHARLES BRUCE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Thousands of Canadian soldiers in camp and billet overseas are going back to school. In a few rare cases the education they brought with them into the army may have been confined to a couple of years at a country school; in others it may have embraced a university degree. That does not matter. There's an opportunity for everyone, regardless of the measure of his learning, to increase the compass of his knowledge or the breadth of his background.

The Canadian army's educational program in Britain is administered by the Canadian Legion, and three men have most to do with it. They are Dr. A. E. Chatwin, onetime Saskatchewan school principal, director of education; Douglas V. Le Pan, University of Toronto graduate and former Harvard lecturer in English, who is personal adviser on education to Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, and Max Freedman, former reporter on The Edmonton Bulletin, adviser on education to Canadian military headquarters.

You will find Canadian soldiers taking correspondence courses or going back to simple arithmetic and reading and writing in "basic training" classes; learning trades in technical schools near where their units are based, preparing to pass general knowledge tests for entrance as officer cadets, and sitting under learned lecturers in the halls of Oxford and London universities.

GIVE CREDIT

For instance, a fellow may want to pass a supplementary in Grade 10 mathematics. He applies for a series of exercises, studies in his own time, and writes an examination which is marked by officials of Battersea Polytechnic in London. If he passes, he gets credit at his school back home. In the past three months pass certificates have been awarded 169 students in subjects ranging from elementary trigonometry to Latin, and in the same period 2,578 men have submitted a total of 4,873 exercises leading to examination. Courses are set in both French and English for any subjects up to and including senior matriculation. There's no cost to the student.

Basic education is designed to bring up to a standard at which they can make the most of their citizenship those fellows who never had a chance to go to school for more than a few months or years. The work is elementary. I saw such classes at headquarters of reinforcement units, where such men are brought from various parts of the army to go to school, and they were very happy about it. They get their army training at the same time.

The technical classes are regarded by the army as highly important. Men who have already shown an increase a man's army efficiency and his civilian skill. For instance, a man may be given to augment his knowledge as a motor mechanic. He gets a chance at instruction on Sunday mornings at the Royal Scottish technical school, or a unit may release a non-commissioned officer to handle such instruction.

SPECIAL LECTURES

Last summer officers and men taking their seven-day leaves were given a chance to attend special lectures, mainly on history, background and future of British at Oxford and London universities. There were, too, "brain trust" discussion at which groups of men were chosen to give their views impromptu on various questions in the presence of their fellows and visitors—such questions as: "If Mr. Churchill resigns tomorrow, who ought to be the next prime minister?" and "Is Canada to be the 49th state or more like the United States?"

Midway through the courses in the summer Oxford became pleased with the result that it was decided to invite Allied nations to send representatives as well, and Poles, Czechs and United States fighting men may be mingling with the Canadians when the courses resume this fall.

Russ Cartoon Hits at Lack Second Front

MOSCOW, Oct. 6.—(AP)—The most powerful Soviet editorial expression to date on the lack of a second land front appeared today in a Pravda cartoon showing a group of generals of the Colonel Blimp type listening to two strong officers dubbed "General Decisiveness" and "General Courage."

It was entitled "A Conference of War Experts."

The artist is a well known cartoonist, Boris Efimov.

A clock on the wall was shown ticking away the calendar was at the month of October. The stuffed-shirt officers, but one of whom wore a field brigadier's hat, tagged with such names as "General Cannot Risk," "General No Hurry," and "General Let's Wait."

F.D.R Lauds Arms Output U.S. Workers

TORONTO, Oct. 6.—(CP)—President Roosevelt told the American Federation of Labor convention in a message sent the gathering here today that the war production record of American workers was "splendid."

"Everywhere during my recent inspection of war activity I found the workers doing all that was laid out for them and more," Mr. Roosevelt said. "At every turn they gave assurance that they can take whatever it takes to win this war. They are not afraid of hard, continuous, precise and dangerous work. They are walking up to it as their duty and part in the war. They are proud of it."

President William Green of the Federation said in reply that the A. F. L. "will respond in any request the President may make and every order which he may issue as commander-in-chief of the army and navy. We regard him as the commander of the army of production as much as he is the commander of the armed forces of the nation.

"Please note," Green added, "he stated that he found on his trip, not that he was informed, that the service of the workers of our country was splendid. That strikes me very deeply, as I know it strikes you."

show that the 52,300 German soldiers were killed in five days between Sept. 25 and 30. Russian losses were not given. The Germans were said to have lost 598 planes, as against 15 for the Russians, during the week ended Sept. 26.

Middle East and Egypt

Allied submarines sank five Axis supply ships, probably sank two more, and torpedoed another. The R.A.F. bombed the Tripoli-Misurata truh road, destroying Axis transport. British troops broke the lull on the Egyptian land front, routing the Germans and Italian positions in the central sector of the El Alamein line.

The loss of a British submarine was announced, and an Italian destroyer was reported sunk by torpedo planes off the Italian coast.

German Marshal Erwin Rommel's presence in Berlin, where he listened to Hitler's speech, may mean more activity on his return to Egypt. Britain is building up her forces for the possibility that the Germans may break through the Caucasus into Iraq and Persia.

Southwest Pacific

American submarines sank at least five, probably seven more Japanese ships and damaged another, the U.S. Navy department announced today. The American submarines a score of 115 Japanese vessels sunk or damaged. Allied troops in New Guinea pushed northward in the Owen Stanley mountains as the Japs retreated to a point some 70 miles by trail from Port Moresby.

In the Solomons, U.S. Army, Navy and Marine fliers destroyed 42 enemy planes without loss to themselves. At Rekata Bay an enemy cruiser was hit with bombs, and another cruiser was set afire with bombs off Shortland Island.

The U.S. Navy department reported the loss of 8,000-ton transport George F. Elliott and the transport Gregory, with but few casualties. In two attacks on Guadalcanal Island the Japanese lost 27 bombers and six fighters. It became evident that American fliers have the edge on the Japanese but it is inconceivable that Japan will not make a concerted attack in force with warships, air forces and troops to drive out marines from the Solomons.

Alaskan Front

Canadian planes and U.S. army bombers and pursuit planes attacked Japanese installations on Kiska island. Two Japanese submarines were strafed, six seaplanes destroyed on the water, a transport hit with bombs, and 150 Japanese killed.

China

American bombers attacked an airdrome in Hanoi, French Indo-China. They also struck the Japanese in Yunnan province. The Japanese must certainly have enough troops concentrated in Manchuria by this time for the invasion of Russia's eastern provinces and it may be forthcoming despite the indications given by Japanese diplomats that there is no present intention of breaking the pact with Russia.

Western Europe

The Allied aerial assault against Germany has increased greatly with renewed fury late in the week. The R.A.F. starting things off Thursday night with a raid by between 300 and 400 bombers on the Baltic port of Flensburg, where the submarine yards were attacked. Seventeen British planes were lost.

On Friday U.S. Flying Fortresses attacked an aircraft plant at Meaulte and a German airfield at St. Omer, both in Northern France, and shot down 15 enemy fighters and U. S. medium, bombers struck at the docks at Le Havre, France. British bombers raided a steel plant near Liege, Belgium, Friday evening.

closing of all motion picture and legitimate theatres; (4) prohibition of all meetings and of the gathering of more than three persons, and (5) unconditional obedience to German authority.

In ordering the invasion alert along the entire coast, the Germans also prohibited civilians from certain coastal areas, advices said. There were increasing indications that the Germans were fearing an invasion more and more, and were determined to break Norwegian resistance before the crisis arose.

Terboven has said earlier that the sabotage had become so widespread that it imperiled the security of the German occupation forces as well as economic production.

QUISLINGS DIVIDED

There were reports also of serious divergencies among Quislings of Norway because of a demand that they enlist to fight Russia.

Berlin announced the dismissal of two so-called "leaders of the Czech National Community" and hinted that there might be further changes in the Croat puppet government in Yugoslavia as the result of the "granting of a long leave" to Eugene Kvaternik, Croat minister of defence, allegedly on the ground of ill health.

These serious reports of trouble in German-occupied territories were supplemented by British reports that Germany was trying to complete its domination of Hungary with the idea of making it eventually a German protectorate.

Berlin announced that Sano Mach, interior minister in the puppet Slovak government, had arrived in Berlin to see Wilhelm Frick, German interior minister, "to exchange thoughts about methods of interior administration."

KING "DISCOURTEOUS"

The trouble in Denmark, it was revealed, has been brewing since King Christian's 72nd birthday, Sept. 26.

Adolf Hitler sent Christian, instead of a purely formal greeting, a "long and hearty" message. Christian replied:

"Thank you. Christian Rex."

Berlin made this the basis for a complaint that the King had been discourteous.

But Stockholm reports said that this was a pretext for new German demands to put Denmark under more firm German control.

It was revealed that before Germany revealed its occupation commander-in-chief and its ministers to Denmark and Denmark recalled its minister to Germany, the Danish cabinet had been meeting repeatedly on relations with Germany.

TO LEARN FATE BY OCT 12.

Stockholm said German military control already has been intensified in Denmark and that the new occupation commander was likely to be a stronger and probably a high Gestapo official.

Germany may cancel its present occupation agreement with Denmark, Stockholm reported, in favor of a harsher decree.

It was reported that Denmark would learn its fate by Oct. 12. Then members of the so-called Danish Free Corps, recruited to fight Russia, are due to leave for the Eastern front. They may be held in Denmark, it was said now, to form a Danish Nazi storm troop body.

It was disclosed that on Sunday there had been a serious disturbance in Copenhagen in which Free Corps men fired into a hostile crowd, wounding 11 persons, two of them seriously.

Danes have been angered by various incidents in which Free Corps men badly mishandled people in streets, cafes, restaurants and cabarets.

There have been many fights between Danes and Free Corps men, Stockholm learned.

The Free Corps man who fired the shots Sunday were immediately attacked by a big crowd which forced their guns from their hands.

Stockholm said the Free Corps men were saved by police reinforcements who fought off the crowd with their clubs and got the Quislings into automobiles.

British sources reported unrest and demonstrations throughout Denmark.

Tim Buck, 16 Others Are to Get Releases

recommendations from an advisory committee, dated yesterday, that Mr. Tim Buck and 16 other persons against whom orders of detention had been made in June, 1940, and who had surrendered to the police a few days ago be conditionally released because their admitted hostility of that period to Canada's participation in the war on the ground that it was an imperialist war has given place to an aggressed desire, since Hitler's attack on the Soviet Union, and under present circumstances, to support a total Canadian effort.

"I have accepted these recommendations and ordered accordingly.

"As you know, this committee had been sitting in Toronto considering these cases since Sept. 29 and completed the hearings on Saturday, Oct. 3.

"In view of the publicity given to your telegram I am also informing the press."

SURRENDER SEPT. 25

Buck, along with 12 others sought with him for more than two years, surrendered to Royal Canadian Mounted Police on Sept. 25. They were lodged in Toronto jail and an advisory board under the Defence of Canada Regulations was sent to hear their case almost immediately.

Buck said in a statement issued to newspapermen on Sept. 25 that the surrender was for the purpose of eliminating "the controversial issue created by the internment orders and the ban against the Communist Party" and eliminating "an obstacle to the development of a total war effort."

over for use as a residence by the owner.

Instead, it was alleged that Mrs. Madill had furnished the house and rented it to a family from the United States for $57.50. It was also revealed that utilities were provided in the higher rent, and that Mrs. Madill had two rooms in the basement reserved for her own use.

In defence Mrs. Madill told the court that she was unaware of the details of the rental regulations and that all she knew was what she had heard over the radio or read in the newspapers. She admitted that there was no friction whatever created between her and her tenants, past and present, and that she felt she had done nothing wrong.

FURTHER DATA

It was also revealed in evidence that after the notice was received by Mr. Jones, he was offered an opportunity to remain there until fall provided that he were willing to pay rent of $45 a month. He had been paying $25 a month since 1939.

Mrs. Madill told the court she had asked Jones to vacate because at that time her plans were to occupy the place and effect improvements, but that later "there seemed to be no point in moving from one house to another."

The cases were heard before Magistrate A. I. Millar, K.C.

Enlistment Age Raised to 35 For Air Crew Duties

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—(CP)—Royal Canadian Air Force headquarters announced yesterday that to allow men of exceptional qualifications to enlist as air crew, the age limit had been raised to include men who have not yet reached their 35th birthday. The previous top age was 33.

An R.C.A.F. spokesman said applicants, to qualify, must possess high physical and educational standards, and even the possession of such qualifications would not necessarily mean the candidates would be enlisted. Suitable candidates will be given "special consideration" by headquarters.

tages of a restored postwar international trade.

"We ought not to delude ourselves that because in an emergency we Canadians are all willing to limit our use of certain vital products—we can or should therefore get along for all time without them. Probably no other country is so essentially an exporting nation as Canada but Canadians cannot expect their surplus products under normal conditions unless the goods of other nations are received in return. On a fundamental basis for the development of international trade is that under it the different parts of the world will be put to those uses for which such places are naturally best suited. That is why we are able to sell our wheat abroad and why we, on the other hand, buy such products as raisins, oranges, bananas, sugar, coffee and tea from outside our borders.

MUTUAL ADVANTAGE

"When trade grows naturally by mutual advantage between the peoples of two countries, friendly relations and good feeling follow naturally with it. In addition the greater our foreign trade the more nearly will our vast natural resources as well as the labor of this country be utilized to the maximum.

"Make no mistake about it," Mr. MacKinnon declared, "the absence of foreign trade would constitute a tremendous economic loss to every Canadian standard and way of life. We cannot be too much on our guard against the danger of the growth of economic nationalism and isolationism, no matter under what guise they appear."

Mr. MacKinnon said that selective service is going to be put into active operation in Canada's war effort as well and manpower will be placed where it can best serve the national interest.

PLAN HARVEST

He said that steps are being taken to meet the harvesting conditions in the west, and that soldiers will be granted leave for harvesting operations where such leave does not interfere with military training.

He added that through the department of agriculture committees were being organized in Ontario and Western Quebec to bring farm help in to the maximum provinces. The first of these excursions, he said, would be coming west this week if it had not already left eastern Canada.

Air mail service to the Mackenzie River basin would be materially increased, he said, and that the increase in population in that area which has taken place in connection with the north's war effort, Mr. MacKinnon said.

Commenting on the ban of Alsike seed shipments to Ontario, he said it was regretable that the coal industry in the province should be affected so seriously. He said that the ban would be lifted as soon as the local requirements had been met, and the normal flow of coal shipments to Ontario would be resumed.

HARVEST HELP

Dealing with the harvesting operations in the provinces to Ontario, he said it was regretable that the coal industry in the province should be affected so seriously. He said that the ban would be lifted as soon as the local requirements had been met, and the normal flow of coal shipments to Ontario would be resumed.

AIRPORT EXPANSION

He said that additional airport facilities in the Edmonton district would be undertaken. This was in connection with the war effort, but would also be part of the post-war establishment. He predicted that Edmonton would be one of the great air centres of the world in the post-war period.

Asked concerning the building of the Alaska railway, he said that if the building of this road was considered a military necessity by the American war department the Canadian government would co-operate in every way possible in its construction.

Comment was declined on the possible route such railway would follow.

FOREIGN TRADE

Dealing with his own department Mr. MacKinnon said that strong foundations had been laid for extensive trade with South American countries and Mexico in the post-war period. He added that while Canada's export trade with these countries was increasing the shipping facilities at present available made it impossible for any extensive increases to be achieved.

Mr. MacKinnon will stop in Alberta for two weeks and will make an extensive tour of the province during that period.

First 2 Coupons In Ration Books Are Still Valid

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—(CP)—The Wartime Prices and Trade Board last night announced that the first two coupons in ration books for tea, coffee and sugar may still be used by any holder who has not already used them.

Coupons one and two were originally valid in the four-week period Sept. 9-Oct. 3.

The board said coupons three and four may be turned in at any time, starting yesterday, but they are intended to cover the four weeks ending Nov. 2.

Each coupon is good for the purchase of two weeks' supply.

Six Billions Asked in New U.S. Tax Bill

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—(AP)—A new tax bill to raise the income of the United States government to around $30,000,000,000 a year will be asked of congress as soon as it enacts the pending revenue measure, Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau said yesterday.

He told a press conference he would request a bill to bring in "at least $6,000,000,000, and possibly much more." At the same time, he said the treasury believes it must have a "minimum of $30,000,000,000 a year revenue to operate during the war."

Churchill is Not Commenting on Stalin Letter

was Mr. Churchill's complete answer.

"I have, of course, read and considered the statement referred to and we are quite clear that no statement from His Majesty's government is called for at the present time further than those that have been already given on this subject."

Then Aneurin Bevan, another Labor member, inquired:

"Is it not a fact that factory workers and groups of workers in institutions all over the country are discussing the implications of Mr. Stalin's statement? Is it the house of commons only which is not to have the opportunity of considering it? Does the prime minister realize the very serious effect on war production that may happen if a feeling grows that there is any misunderstanding between the Soviet Union and ourselves? Will there not be an early opportunity of clearing the public mind in this matter?"

"I have nothing to add to the statement I have just made."

Saying that Stalin's letter seemed to indicate that "there are not the closest relations in co-ordinating staff work for political purposes," a third Labor questioner, Frederick Belenger, asked for assurance that "there is the closest integration in staff matters between Russia and this country."

It was to this that the Prime Minister gave the answer which brought the house's shouts of "Hear, hear!" — a rare one in the House to avoid pressing "these matters unduly at a period which is certainly significant."

The discussion soon was cut off, however, after Clement Davies, Liberal member for Montgomery, had declared that there was a "tremendous amount of discussion" over the Stalin statement and asked the Prime Minister "to consider an early opportunity of discussing it" in the House.

French Submarines Operating Between Toulon and Dakar

VICHY, Oct. 6.—(AP)—French submarines are continually moving between Toulon, the French navy's Mediterranean base, and Dakar in West Africa, Admiral Auphan said in last night in comment on reports published abroad that submarines had put out from Toulon.

These sources said submarines have been used to escort French merchant shipping on this route since Vichy announced a convoy policy in October, 1941.

It was indicated that the submarines might be used in connection with announced plans to evacuate French women and children from Dakar.

ARP Director Fears Raids on Canada's Cities

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—(CP)—Hon. R. J. Manion, director of civil air raid precautions, said last night he will be very much surprised if some Canadian cities—inland as well as on the coast—are not attacked from the air before the war ends and that less than half the cities of Canada have proper fire-fighting equipment to meet even normal peacetime needs.

This lack of fire-fighting equipment is "almost a crime against our national life," he said in an address in connection with observance of Fire Precautions Week.

DUTY NEGLECTED

The peacetime "duty" of bringing fire-fighting apparatus up to normal needs had been too much neglected by municipal authorities from coast to coast.

"I am informed by the authorities that in the great and prosperous province of Ontario less than half our cities have the proper fire-fighting equipment for normal peacetime requirements, and I am advised that the same is true of Canada as a whole," said Dr. Manion.

"In times such as the present that is almost a crime against our national life!"

During wartime, all citizens—men and women—who were not physically fit to join the fighting forces should utilize it was their duty to offer their services as auxiliary firemen, fire watchers, air raid wardens, or first aid helpers, "so that they may feel certain that they have done their duty toward maintaining for our children and for those who follow after the freedom of our country."

The great damage suffered by London during German raids had been due to fire-destruction. Protection against this destruction had not been fully prepared at the beginning of the war.

URGES PREPARATION

Canada could prepare to meet the fire danger brought about by enemy air raids by an elaboration and extension of peacetime fire-fighting and fire prevention plans.

Peace methods included the provision of up-to-date electrical fixtures; the cleaning out of potential fire hazards like cluttered-up attics, sheds or pantries; avoidance of carelessness by smokers, particularly "that habit of life and property that accompanies smoking in bed"; and in general the carrying out of precautions recommended in educational campaigns.

ONLY THE STARS ARE NEUTRAL

•Health of Russian Army Is Surprise to American Doctor

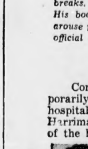
Quentin Reynolds, ace reporter, has, among other gifts, the uncanny ability to be on the scene when world-shaking news breaks. He was in London during the critical days of the Blitz. His books, articles, broadcasts, films and lectures did more to arouse popular support in America for Britain's cause than all the official communiques and propaganda combined.—EDITOR.

Instalment 15

By QUENTIN REYNOLDS

Commander Irwin L. Norman, M.C., won me over temporarily from the making of the picture to a new interest in hospitals. He had come to Moscow with us as a member the Harriman mission and he had remained behind to take care of the health of the American Embassy staff pending the arrival of an Army doctor who was en route. Dr. Norman eventually became very fond of me. Before I had left Russia, I picked up about every Soviet ailment that was available, and I became Dr. Norman's most regular customer and private guinea pig. I began with a cute little number called "scabies." Very small bugs dig under your skin and lay eggs. Then the little scabies come out of the eggs, look around, say, "The hell with this," and start to burrow their way toward freedom. They raise great scabs on your body and they itch so that only a very liberal dose of sleeping pills will get you into slumber. It is the most annoying disease I ever had.



REYNOLDS

"You get this thing," Norman explained, "from sleeping with someone who has it."

"I've been sleeping with a ghost called Trotsky for the past few weeks," I reminded him. "I've got his suite and his bed. Do you think I caught it from him?"

"You misunderstand," Norman said. "Scabies is a common complaint at the front. Apparently some soldier on leave had your room before you arrived and left his bed infected. That's how you caught it."

The best way to cure scabies he told me, was hot sulphur baths. However, there was no sulphur in Moscow of the type needed. But he did find some sulphur ointment and he lathered me from head to foot with it. I hated living with myself for a few days, but it killed the little brats and within a week the enormous scabs I had all over my body disappeared. The lot of a foreign correspondent in Moscow contrasted with caviar, dining with ambassadors and knowing diplomats and cabinet ministers by first names). The first thing any foreign correspondent does in Europe (except Britain) is to contract the "cold-known, so-called 'diplomatic' fever," or to give it the medical name under which it goes—dysentery. From there on, you usually pick up whatever assorted diseases the country you are in has to offer.

Norman injected all of us (correspondents included) for typhus, typhoid and tetanus. None of us liked the idea and we tried to duck his injections at first. But when a few of the Embassy staff reported that Norman's work with the needle was so light that you never felt the prick of it, we hurried to him.

MADE STUDY

Norman was only 35 and he was bright-eyed and eager about anything new. He spent a great deal of time in Moscow hospitals watching operations, his fingers, I am sure, itching to get at a scalpel, although his primary interest was medicine, not surgery. Because of his service in our Navy, he had of necessity, become a specialist in venereal diseases. The realization that gonorrhea is about as common in our Army and Navy as sunburn in Florida, will not, I trust, come as a shock to any one. Investigating conditions in the Russian armed forces, Norman was startled that gonorrhea and syphilis were virtually unknown. He made a serious study of the subject, and his conclusions were interesting.

"The real cause of venereal disease," Norman explained to me, "is prostitution. Nineteen out of a hundred cases of the disease come from contact with prostitutes who have it. Now, it is by belief that prostitution is almost entirely the fault of unemployment. Women, except in a very few communities, are not brought up to prostitution as a profession. Get the story of a thousand girls in the ports of Europe, South America and the United States and you will find that nearly all of them got into the racket because they couldn't earn a living any other way.

"Here in Russia I've found that there is no unemployment. Every man and woman in Russia who wants to work can find work. As far as I know, there are no streetlevel laws against prostitution; there are no penalties for it, and yet it is virtually non-existent. The reason is that women are given jobs. Look at our hotel—the National. The manager is a woman. Every floor clerk is a woman. The same is true of the Metropole. Go around the hospitals. They're full of women, not only nurses, but doctors and scientists. Now, don't get me wrong. I'm not one of those tourists who come to Russia, spend as little time as you and I have spent here, and then start popping off about it as wonderful it is or how horrible it is.

KNOW THEIR STUFF

"I don't care about anything but medicine, and, believe me, in medicine these Russians are people at know their stuff as well as we do. Mind you, I have enough pride in American medicine to think it is the best in the world. But, in lots of ways, these people here are our equals. Read whatever social significance into it that you want, but give a thought to the fact that the Red Army and Air Force are virtually free from venereal disease. You can't say that about any other army in the world. As a doctor, that impresses me."

Well, it impressed me, too. From the viewpoint of thousands of American doctors who specialize in what used to be called the "social diseases" and make a handsome profit out of this practice, this might be an unhappy state of affairs. But from Dr. Norman's viewpoint—and mine—it was conspicuous achievement as a medical, as well as social experiment.

I listened to Dr. Norman, and the more I listened the more I liked him and respected his views. Once, as a kid, I had a job as orderly in the operating room of a hospital and the fascination of those days has never left me. I'm a sucker for doctors, and any time they're in talking mood I'm the perfect audience for them.

I made a list of the hospitals and clinics Norman suggested might be of interest to a layman. My Russian secretary wrote my request in Russian and then I brought it to Pulgonov. Pulgonov had to consult with Lozovsky. Lozovsky had to phone the hospital heads and make appointments. It took a week to do what I could have done in London in a half hour by three or four phone calls. But that is how it is in Moscow and after all, Moscow makes no attempt to make London or Washington change its way of doing things so there seems no authority for us to ask Moscow to conform to the London or Washington methods. It was finally arranged. My Sophigna came with me, of course.

EFFICIENT SECRETARY

In fact I seldom ventured ten steps away from the National Hotel without Sophiana. She had once been Erskine Caldwell's secretary; she had been the secretary of Vernon Bartlett, press attache to the British Embassy. Years before that, she had been secretary to Spencer Williams, president of the American Chamber of Commerce in Moscow. Because of her work for him, he had been accused of being an American spy and was tossed into the clink. Joseph Davies, then American Ambassador to Russia, used his best offices to get the obviously innocent Sophiana out of the clutches of the OGPU. But this intervention merely proved their case against her.

"If the American Ambassador uses his influence to get her off," they cried triumphantly, "she must be an American. Otherwise he would not bother. The American millionaire and diplomat Davies would never worry about a mere secretary."

So off to the concentration camp went Sophiana, a happily married Russian woman with two young children. For seven years she worked as a laborer on farms. Then she was released. She emerged from those seven years of agony without one drop of bitterness in her soul.

Oh, they had been wrong, she admitted, but they had made a natural mistake. She came out of her imprisonment a perfect health, mentally and physically. She came out of it a more fervent Russian patriot than she had been when she went in.

She took a risk working for me or working for any foreigner, but she was willing to take it. She had great faith in her country, and she was 100 per cent loyal to the Marxist ideal. It has been my good fortune to have good secretaries. Sophiana was one of the best. She was big, strong, perhaps 36, and attractive. Her English was excellent; so was her French and German. I admired the way she fought with the Russian bureaucracy, in fact, I loved everything about my Sophiana.

WORTH FORTY A WEEK.

Lest anyone think I am hinting at romantic interlude, let me hasten to add that I am sure that anyone who might have had the temerity to make even the conventional pass at her would have been hit very hard in a vulnerable spot by a still blunt instrument. Sophiana impressed you that way. She was invaluable to me and was well worth the forty dollars a week Collier's (all unknowingly) paid for her services.

It was Caldwell and his wife, Margaret Bourke White, impressed by her ability and loyalty, who had set that figure on her services, and, like the Hollywood star, who will not lower her price, Sophiana would henceforth never labor for less. Happily, Erskine Caldwell, during his stay in Moscow, had trained her to work odd hours. I work odd hours. My first order to Sophiana was to wake me every morning at ten-thirty with four cups of tea and a pack of either British or American cigarettes. Four cups of tea and about ten cigarettes is my idea of the perfect way to start the way. Russian cigarettes weren't bad, but there was only about an inch of tobacco in them: the rest was a sort of cardboard holder. You took five puffs and the damn thing was finished.

SOPHIANA'S FIRST DAY

I'll never forget Sophiana's first day on the job. I was awakened, not by the brutal, horrid rays of the morning sun let into the bedroom by the imbecilic hand of one whose idea of a cheery good-morning was to pull aside the blackout curtains and raise the shade, but by the soft electric light coming from the chandelier upon which Trotsky once gazed. Half awake, I heard Sophiana whispering in Russian to a waiter, and finally when I opened both eyes there on the table at my bedside were a huge pot of tea, a pack of Players and a pack of Chesterfields. Hooked in amazement and delight at Sophiana, who stood there sturdy, rocklike, placid, not looking for praise; just a good craftsman who had pride in her job and who knew she had done well.

You couldn't get either British or American cigarettes in Moscow then. Even the British Embassy didn't have British cigarettes, chiefly because Sir Stafford Cripps, the Ambassador, liked Russian cigarettes himself, and saw no reason why his staff should ask that Players be sent from London. Only the American Embassy had American cigarettes, and members of the staff were very decent about selling us an occasional carton. But we all knew that supplies from home had about stopped, so we didn't like to try our pals at the Embassy too far.

I looked at Sophiana as Balboa must have looked at the Pacific Ocean. She was indeed a jewel of rare price.

"You and I are going to get along, sweetheart," I said, completely immersed in hot tea and cigarettes and happiness.

"Your bath is ready," Sophiana said. Wonderful Sophiana! Marvellous Sophiana! I couldn't wait to get back to London to tell Betty Marais all about my wonderful secretary I had found who was so superior in every way to every secretary I had ever hired. I loved everything about Sophiana except one thing. She insisted upon calling me "Mr. Reynolds." I can't stand a secretary or office boy who calls me "mister." The little "mister" should, I feel, be reserved for cabinet ministers alone. Anyone who gets you hot tea, cigarettes, and wakes you gently without the aid of the artificial glare of sunlight; anyone who hears you talking and swearing to yourself while you're working on a story which doesn't jell; anyone who acts as a buffer between you and people you don't want to see and who arranges that you talk to and see those you should see; anyone who gives you 100 per cent loyalty and exercises the slight discipline that one needs to get things done that must be done—that person is too close to you to have to stumble over that horribly formal unnatural barrier of "mister." But I could never convert Sophiana.

Sufficient Men Available For Draft Transfer

By FRANK FLAHERTY

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—(CP)—With 19-year-olds and friendly aliens now liable to call for compulsory military service, it is believed that sufficient men now are available to carry the call-up machinery past its transfer from the war services department to the labor department's selective service branch.

This transfer—expected Dec. 1—is aimed at achieving more centralized control over the use of manpower in the armed forces and in essential industry. It is believed likely and further extensions of the group liable to compulsory service will be decided in the light of an over-all national manpower plan.

NEW SYSTEM

In this connection the selective service branch, with a complete picture of the industrial manpower situation before it, may introduce some new methods into the system of selecting and calling men for the army.

Last week's extension of the call-able group to bring 19-year-olds and aliens of neutral or friendly citizenship within its scope is expected to make a potential 135,000 additional men available for call.

In extending the callable group to take in 19-year-olds, the government rejected the alternative possibility of calling married men. Such a decision may indicate that the next extension will follow the same line and extend the group down to those aged 18, the minimum age for service in the active forces.

The married group is not viewed as holding great possibilities as a source of supply of men for the forces.

Since the introduction of compulsory service all men who were married after July 15, 1940, have been liable to call and 25,000 have been summoned as required. Since few men marry before they are 21, most of the married men would be obtained by an extension of the regulations now are 23 years old or over, with the great bulk of them over 25.

FEWER ELIGIBLE

Experience in the call-up so far has demonstrated that after the age of 26 most men who can be obtained for service out of a given potential number drops rapidly each year.

Recently an informed source estimated there are still about 370,000 single men between the ages of 19 and the age groups now covered by the regulations—19 to .40 years, inclusive.

It is believed this is what Elliott M. Little, director of National Selective Service, had in mind when he said that "the bottom of the manpower pool for the forces is not nearly depleted."

It was explained here, however that Mr. Little did not mean that men could be obtained easily, but simply that there are still in the country. The job of selective service is to get the men for essential jobs, including the fighting forces, without interfering with some other essential work.

Price Control In Canada, U.S. Closely Linked

By B. T. RICHARDSON

Edmonton Bulletin Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA, Oct. 6. — Canadian and American price control measures will march side by side in future, informed sources here predicted, as Canadian price controllers studied developments over the week-end at Washington as the giant machine began to cut the civilian economy under straight-jacket controls of the type pioneered among democratic nations by Canada.

As Canadian price officials studied the set-up and powers of the new Byrnes-Vinson economic stabilization at Washington, they found evidence that Canada has blazed the way for its powerful neighbor in questions of civilian economic controls.

YEAR BEHIND CANADA

In many important features, the United States has been nine to twelve months behind Canada. Canadian and American cost of living indices are on a fairly comparable basis. The Canadian index reading for September will be reported today, but August readings for both countries showed that the cost of living on both sides of the border is now approximately 20 August readings, on the basis of 1935-9 equals 100, were: Canada 121.3; U.S. 120.

That the U.S. has learned from Canadian methods is shown:

1—Prices—Today, Oct. 6, 1942, U.S. extended a ceiling to food prices, most vital governing factor in the cost of living, on a basis of Sept. 28-Oct. 2, 1942, prices. Canada's price ceiling, including food, has been in effect since Dec. 1, 1941, on prices of Sept. 15 to Oct. 11, 1941, prices.

2—Rental Control—U.S. general ceiling, at existing levels, went into effect yesterday. Canada's general rental ceiling went into effect Nov 23, 1941. Both countries had selective local rental control before coming to a general ceiling.

CONTROL OF WAGES

3—Wages—U.S. ceiling, on the base of Sept. 15, 1942, levels went into effect yesterday, with a local minimum of the highest wage paid since Jan. 1, 1942. Canada put on its wage ceiling, on the base of the highest level paid since 1926, on November 15, 1941.

4—Salaries—U. S. forbids, as from yesterday, increases for salaries above $5,000 a year, with a ceiling of $25,000 probable. Canada's salary control went into effect Dec. 1, 1941, providing control of increases. No ceiling is stated, but the effective ceiling determined by taxation is around $23,000 a year.

Tank-Landing Craft Being Constructed At Kaiser Yards

OAKLAND, Calif., Oct. 6.—(AP) —Henry J. Kaiser reported last night he had launched the first of a series of tank-landing craft from a new yard built especially for their construction.

The west coast builder said the launching came exactly 125 days after his men began building the yard—Richmond No. 4 plant. Another one of his Pacific coast yards —he didn't say which one—already has launched one of these special purpose type craft, and when peak production is reached Kaiser said he will be turning out two a week.

PESKY SPARROWS

Sparrows, unknown in Australia until imported by settlers, have become such pests in some parts of the continent that, in one district, there is a price on them and their eggs.

Rattlesnakes and other poisonous members of the viper family detect living objects partly by a highly developed sense of temperature.

ALLIES FULLY PREPARED

Rival Desert Armies Expected To Unleash October Offensive

Dan de Luce saw the war's first blaze in Poland. In the last three years, he has seen practically all the contending armies in action. He came home last week after 100,000 miles of travel, fresh from a stay on the African desert front. This story tells what he found there.—EDITOR.

By DAN DE LUCE

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP)—That see-saw war in Egypt's western desert is due to blaze up any day now in an October offensive.

When two mobile armies crouch "bull down" in the front for a month of relative sand and rocks of a 40-mile inactivity, trigger fingers on both sides get restless. But only a military fortune teller can say whether it will be Rommel or Alexander who will launch the next attack.

The facts which both armies know are these:

The Allies, thanks to generous reinforcements from both British and American factories, are maintaining convincing numerical superiority in the air. The German air force is still heavily committed in Russia that the Axis ground forces of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel must get along with meagerly rationed air support.

As Rommel discovered in his flop push Sept. 1, the Allies virtually have made good the losses in tanks and guns which they suffered in last July's disaster. He got a taste of his own medicine, too—his armored columns were lured into ranges of massed batteries. He sacrificed about 100 German and Italian tanks of a force generally estimated at less than 500. Thereby he forced a bulge in the left wing of the Allied line that so far has been strategically worthless to him.

ARMS IMPROVED

The quality as well as the quantity of Allied arms is improving. Rommel's heavy Mark IV special tanks and his long-barrelled 88-millimetre guns are no longer markedly superior to Allied equipment.

A considerable shakeup of Allied generals, ranging from commander-in-chief to divisional commanders, has had a tonic effect on the troops. Their offensive patrols nightly harass the Axis outposts which rarely retaliate. An Allied soldier may hang up a sign, "target for tonight," on his dugout and paint "nobody's 'ome" on the side of his lorry, but he's not downhearted. He's honestly rarin' to go.

Contrary to Axis expectations, the Egyptian population is prodigably more friendly and co-operative with the British forces now than any other time in 20 years. Last July, when Rommel was almost within sight of the Nile delta and so many military and diplomatic offices in Cairo burned their papers in one day that it became known as "Ash Wednesday", Egyptians could have stabbed the Allied cause in the back. They didn't.

Not only wealthy beys, who distrusted an Axis propaganda program for cutting up big landed estates, but lowly fellaheens, with no property to lose, made friendly gestures to the hard-pressed Britons.

SITUATION BETTER

If the will to win means anything, if new leadership and powerful reserves of armor, artillery and aircraft count for something, then the Egyptian situation is better in reality than it looks on a map.

An English drum major summed it up for me last month as he led the brass band of a newly-arrived infantry battalion at Sand Hill quarters just 10 miles or so from Rommel's front line. The band was playing "Roll out the Barrel."

"We've changed the words," the drum major explained. "Now we call it, 'Roll out Der Rommel'."

Savage Ground Clashes In Battle For Solomons

By WILLIAM F. FRYE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—(AP)—The battle for the Solomons continues with savage ground clashes and mounting destruction of enemy planes, the United States navy reported yesterday.

The marines are maintaining their positions on Guadalcanal in the Solomons, said a communique, and frequent short engagements between the opposing ground forces have made no important changes in the lines. However, despite hard-hitting American air attacks, the Japanese have succeeded in landing small reinforcements for their troops on the island.

In two communiques, the navy reported yesterday that:

1—United States fliers in the Solomons during four days of widespread action last week damaged an enemy destroyer, shot down 10 enemy aircraft and damaged two others, with no American losses reported. This brought the total of Japanese planes destroyed in the Solomons to date to 229. The enemy also has suffered 29 more sunk or damaged there.

SUBMARINE LOST

2—The navy's submarine Grunion is long overdue in the Pacific, and must be presumed to be lost. One of the United States' newest undersea craft, the 1,526-ton Grunion was launched last Dec. 22 at Groton, Conn. She was commanded by Lt.-Cmdr. Mannart L. Abele, of Quincy, Mass., and although the navy did not announce the sub's complement the normal complement for vessels of her size is approximately 65 men.

In the Solomons the navy reported, a small force of enemy bombers attempted a raid last Wednesday on the American positions on Guadalcanal but interceptors shot down four of the large escort of Japanese fighter planes, and forced the bombers to jettison their explosives before they reached their target.

The same day American planes bombed and strafed enemy ositions at Rekata Bay, about 120 miles north of Guadalcanal, destroying two seaplanes and setting fires among small supply vessels off Guadalcanal and attacking enemy troops on the island.

The following day the air attacks continued against the Japanese on Guadalcanal and navy dive bombers also attacked Rekata Bay, setting a munitions dump afire and damaging two enemy aircraft.

On Thursday, attacks against Japground forces were continued by army planes, while the navy and marine dive bombers and torpedo planes struck after four Japanese destroyers which apparently were covering a small enemy landing at Vira Harbor, on New Georgia Island, about 120 miles northwest. One of the destroyers was hit and damaged, said the navy, and when last seen "was dead in the water."

HOW TO RELIEVE PILE TORTURE QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment. Neglect or lack of treating this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Dean-Reid Pile Ointment from Morris Drug Stores or any druggist and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Dean-Reid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at small cost.

If you try Dean-Reid and are not entirely pleased with the result, your druggist will gladly return your money.

More Hog Money

The new bacon agreement calls for the shipment of 675,000,000 pounds of Canadian pork to British ports during the coming year. The price is to be ten per cent higher than for the present year, and the increase is to be passed along to the farmers. The increase goes into effect immediately, and will apply during the balance of the present year.

To make up this one-eighth increase in shipments to Britain a corresponding increase in hog production in Canada will be necessary, even if home consumers are to get no more pork than they are now getting, which is considerably below the demand. But the increase will not be uniform throughout Canada. Production in the eastern provinces is expected to go up 15 per cent, while western farmers are counted on to raise 29 per cent more hogs than they are marketing this year.

The west is therefore to get the major part of the benefit from the larger order at the higher price, mainly because of the heavy crop of feed grain available in the prairie provinces. Ten per cent higher prices on 25 per cent increase in hogs marketed will put a good many millions more money in the pockets of western hograisers. And of this extra money Alberta stands to collect the lion's share, for this is the largest hog-producing province in the Dominion.

Stalin Gives the Word

Just a year ago Stalin called on the other Allies, and on the United States, for equipment for his armies. He got the supplies, in such quantities as could be spared even at the cost of defeats on other fronts and at the risk of Britain being invaded. Because the supplies were sent, the Russian armies have been able to keep on fighting though the majority of their munition plants fell into enemy hands, along with great areas from which war materials were drawn.

Now Stalin is calling on the other Allies—which now include the United States—to start action somewhere which will ease the pressure on the eastern front. This call should be met, and undoubtedly will be met, as that of last October. Where and when and how are questions which the military experts must answer.

This is the first time the Russian chief has publicly asked for a "second front", for that is what his appeal amounts to. In so doing he asks in effect that the other Allies fulfill their "obligations"—plainly implying a definite understanding on the matter. This, he says, is all that is necessary to ensure victory; for, he declares, Russia is power to spare, or more less, if not greater," than the Nazis can bring to bear.

Stalin's statement looks like a prearranged signal that in his judgment the time has come to strike in another quarter.

The Starvation Policy

Herr Goering says Germany is going to eat next winter if the peoples of the occupied countries have to starve. Horrible as it sounds, this is nothing new. The Field Marshal has only put into words what has been the consistent Nazi practice during the past three winters of war, and stated openly one reason why German troops were rushed into every neighboring country where there were food supplies worth the stealing.

That he is speaking the truth in this instance there is no reason to doubt. If he had said the available food would be distributed evenly throughout the Reich and the occupied states, or that every effort would be made to avert famine in these states, no one would have believed him. For that claim would belie the whole Nazi record and the essential purpose of the "new order".

The captive countries were not struck down for their benefit, but that of Germany. They had food which could be swept into the Reich, resources which could be exploited for the Hitler war and economic machine, territory which could be used as fighting ground against the Allies. That they are being stripped relentlessly of their crops and live stock to support the Fuehrer's armies and war workers is a matter of course.

If millions of the subject peoples starve and weaken from under-nourishment, there will be less danger of revolt, according to the Goering calculations.

Those Vacant Rooms

There may be compulsory billeting in Canadian centres where congestion has been caused by an influx of war workers. That is not threatened, as yet. But the machinery which would provide a compulsory system has been set up. For the time it is to function by appealing to house-holders to rent their vacant rooms. But should the appeal fail the reasonable inference is that stronger methods will be applied as and where necessary.

A survey of living quarters is to be made in these centres, for the purpose of finding out how many rooms are vacant and where they are. The implication is plain. One way or another the vacant rooms must be put to use.

One can surmise the keynote of the protests, where protests are made. We shall no doubt hear again—it is to be hoped in very few quarters—that a Canadian's home is his "castle". It is. But only while Canadian law prevails. And just now we are engaged in a life and death struggle which will decide whether or not it is to prevail. If the Axis should win, the owner of the "castle" would not own it any more. It would pass into alien hands, and the present holder of the title would live in a cellar or a garret as the whim or the interest of the spoilsmen might decree.

If the Axis is not to win, the war industries must be kept going everywhere to full capacity. There cannot do so unless those who run the machines and turn out the tools can get places in which to live. At present in some Canadian centres these war workers cannot get accommodation. That is the background; and against it no person can have trouble sketching in the threat that billeting may be made compulsory as and where required.

In August "only" 2,310 persons were killed on highways in the United States. That is the lowest August figure since 1926. Not a quarter that many Canadians were killed in the furious fighting at Dieppe.

Survivors from the Ottawa pay high tribute to their commander, Lieut.-Commander Rutherford. He refused to clamber onto an already crowded raft, and died rather than endanger others. The Canadian navy is doing something besides convoy merchant ships and sink enemy submarines. It is also building traditions.

United States forces in Alaska have established a base close enough to the Japanese-occupied islands that land-based fighter planes are now able to join in the attacks on these enemy positions. Hitherto long-range bombers and carrier-borne fighters alone could reach the targets. With the Japs on the defensive in the Solomons and New Guinea, this move in the northern Pacific must make Tokyo still more hesitant about invading Siberia to pull Hitler's chestnuts out of the fire.

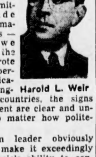
Second Front Delay May Disrupt Allied Accord

Confidence And Unity Are Most Vital Factors For Us.

By HAROLD L. WEIR

To the private and semi-official expressions of bitterness against Britain and the United States which the Russian censors have carefully allowed to escape from the Soviet Union, there is now added the personal reproaches of dread Stalin himself over the Allied failure to relieve Russia by establishing a second front.

It is true that Premier Stalin's indictment has not been permitted to invade official diplomatic documents — so far as we know. But in his letter he wrote to a newspaperman for publication in all English-speaking countries, the signs of his resentment are clear and unmistakable, no matter how politely couched.



Harold L. Weir

The Russian leaders obviously took pr e make it exceedingly plain that Russia's ability to continue to play a major part in the struggle against Hitler will depend entirely upon the willingness of the British and the Americans to "fulfill their obligations fully and on time."

No Toadying

Now, as I have said and written before, it would be a very great mistake to assume that all our military and productive energies at this time could possibly be devoted to setting the stage for a great Russian victory.

It is a mistake to assume that the Russians are carrying the entire burden of the war. The British, the Canadians, the Americans and all other Allied forces are doing a heavy job and doing it well.

It is a mistake to assume that we could neglect all the other vital fronts to concentrate on the relief of the Russian armies, if, as I say, from a purely military viewpoint.

Moreover, it would be folly to suppose that the Russians are dictating the grand strategy of the war, tha: the salvation of Russia as a purely military job, if the cardinal objective at this or any other time, that it should be necessary to toady to the Soviets or to anybody else for the sake of winning this war.

Nevertheless, the situation has so shaped itself that a second front for the relief of the Russians has become a primary necessity for reasons, as the lawyers say, set forth hereinafter.

Confidence

The United Nations have two fundamental assets which are not only worth more than any of the others, but are the basis of all the others.

The first of these fundamental assets is unity.

Part of Hitler's strength consists of the homogeneous nature of his forces. They are welded into a single unit, motivated by a single political creed which has become one of the inspirational and driving force of a religious creed.

Against this unified force, we have to oppose men of many nations and many creeds and many political doctrines.

The only way we can give our diversified forces the strength of Hitler's forces, man for man and unit for unit, is through the influence of an almost miraculous single-mindedness of purpose. We must attain and maintain unity between our various allies at almost any cost.

The second of our fundamental assets is confidence which is the implementation of our unity.

We must approximate the cohesion of Hitler's forces and the power of his personality, which holds them together, by a consummate confidence in one another.

That is the only way we can win the war.

Vital Move

For this reason and from this standpoint, a second front is imperative.

The military dissolution of Russia is much less important, in our viewpoint, than the loss of Russia's confidence. The complete defeat of the Soviet armies on all their fronts is much less vital to us than the prospect of a break in our unity through Russian discontent.

Even a major military defeat, which is the worst that could happen to us in a premature invasion of the European continent, would be less disastrous than the disaffection of a powerful nation from the Allied ranks.

We might worry along with reduced equipment and reduced manpower. We cannot worry along without friends.

For the disaffection of Russia would not only be a military blow, but a devastatingly heavy moral blow as well.

It would tend to cause a fatal wave of distrust and suspicion to arise among all the nations of the democratic alliance.

Objectives First

Perhaps the greatest weakness in our grand strategy is our tendency to make it depend upon military considerations.

We cut our coat to fit our cloth, instead of planning our coat and patching out the cloth to fit it.

In other words, we undertake those military objectives which appear to be best suited to our military strength.

This, of course, is an exact reversal of the method adopted by the Axis. Hitler decides that a certain objective must be gained. It is the business of his generals to work out the technique for achieving that objective. It is up to them to supply the ways of means of doing that which needs to be done.

His leadership, therefore, is objective rather than strategical. Our leadership, on the other hand, is strategical rather than objective.

And that is exactly what holds up the second front.

What is the sort of thing that imperils our relations with a powerful ally and jeopardizes our chance of winning the war.

The Axis cannot defeat us. But we can defeat ourselves by permitting a break in our common unity and a destruction of that confidence which must exist among us.

The river at Edmonton is a bountiful source of water supply but the height of the town above the river, some 160 feet, makes the cost of pumping water from the river to the town laborious and costly. For years this was done by teams and wagons, but with the growth of population, this became such an evident loss of labor that some years ago some enterprising citizens put in a steam plant and raised water from the river to a tank on the town level, at which the watermen get their tank loads of water for distribution to the town houses. But this method soon became antiquated and with the progress of the town a demand arose for an up-to-date system of waterworks. The necessary steps were taken by the council last winter, the bylaws agreed to by the ratepayers, and the work put in hand. In taking up the matter the town council decided upon municipal ownership of waterworks and electric light, and on combining as far as possible the necessary power plant so as to reduce cost of labor and supervision. The waterworks will decide the plant will be located in the same building, and the same boilers will furnish steam for both. The power house is situated on the river bank to the east of Fourth street and within the agricultural society's grounds. It occupies part of the site of the first Hudson's Bay Co.'s post at Edmonton, built sometime in the 1700's.

By W. H. COLLIER

In his last budget forecast Hon. J. L. Ilsley estimated that the federal government would be required to borrow $1850 million during the present fiscal year, including the $1000 million gift to the United Kingdom, and besides would raise $2050 million of revenue by various forms of taxation. The total expenditures of the government would be $3900 million for the year.

Therefore the federal government is spending this year an average of $10,500,000 a day, of which $5,500,000 is derived from taxation and $5,000,000 from borrowing. The provincial and municipal governments themselves are also at present expenditures in Canada, federal, provincial and municipal combined, amounts to $18,500,000 a day, of which $6,500,000 a day comes from taxation and $5,000,000 from borrowing.

It is estimated that the total civilian expenditures amounts to an average of $7,000,000 a day. Therefore the total national income of the people of Canada this year amounts to an average of $18,500,000 a day, of which $11,500,000 is derived from government expenditures and $7,000,000 from civilian expenditures. Therefore, the total national income for the year will be about $6,750 million.

Savings

Since the people of Canada collectively are earning and receiving this year an income of $18,500,000 a day and are paying out of it $6,500,000 a day in taxes and are spending a further $7,000,000 a day for their own civilian purposes, therefore they are saving $5,000,000 a day, which is the same amount as the government is spending with the money borrowed from them.

It is a fundamental economic law that whenever the government spends borrowed money with the people, no matter from whom the money is borrowed, whether from the chartered banks, from the Bank of Canada or from individuals, the people collectively will save an equal amount out of the national income

If the government spends $B of borrowed money during any year the people will save $B out of the year's national income and the net public debt of the country will be increased by $B.

During the past fiscal year the federal government spent with the people $4114 million of borrowed money and the people save the same amount out of the year's income and the net public debt of Canada was increased by $414 million.

Inflation

As stated above, this year the federal government is spending an average of $5,000,000 a day of borrowed money and, consequently, the people are saving $5,000,000 a day from the national income. The spending of the borrowed money by the government causes an excess of income of an equal amount over what the people actually spend for civilian purposes and after paying their taxes. They involuntarily save this excess because there are no civilian purposes for which they can spend it.

The government is borrowing the $5,000,000 a day from the chartered banks by means of treasury bills and deposit certificates.

The government issues the treasury bills and deposit certificates to the banks and the banks debit and credit the government with new bank money. The government is spending this new bank money with the people and therefore is putting into circulation an average of $5,000,000 a day of new money.

The new money is setting up inflationary tendencies of tremendous power. The banks will lend 90,000,000 a day of income left after paying their taxes, but there is only $7,000,000 a day of civilian things being produced which they can possibly buy. For every $12 of income which the people have for their own use there are only $7 of civilian things available to be bought and, therefore they are saving the remaining $5.

The people are naturally trying to spend the $5 and are bidding up prices against each other for the things that are available and if it were not or the ceilings on prices and the rationing of the governments to take out of circulation the $5,000,000 a day of savings by selling the people bonds, savings certificates and stamps there would be tremendous inflation. The savings which are taken out of the govern- ment are paid over to the banks to redeem the treasury bills and deposit certificates.

Two Steps

Government borrowing, therefore, under our present fiscal policy takes two steps. First, the government borrows new money from the chartered banks and in the spending of it puts it into circulation. The people involuntarily save an equal amount out of the current income and the government then borrows the savings in order to pay back the banks. The people, therefore, are continually receiving more money for their own use than after paying their taxes, than there are civilian things available to be bought which is the root cause of inflation. It is evident, therefore, that the quicker the government can get the savings out of circulation after spending the new money which it borrows from the banks, the less will be the inflationary pressure on prices and the tendency of inflation.

It costs the banks only the expenses for bookkeeping in order to create and lend the government the $5,000,000 a day which they do so and they run no risk of any loss. Therefore, the average rate of interest which the banks are charging on the treasury bills and the deposit certificates is very low, probably about ½ per cent. But, in order to get the $5,000,000 a day of savings back from the people and out of circulation, and paying the government millions in advertising and the labor of some 22,000 workers for the National Finance committee all over Canada selling the bonds, savings certificates and stamps, besides paying around 3% per annum on the savings.

In conformity with the fundamental economic law that the people save the same amount out of the national income that the government spends do you proved money I have developed a simple definite plan whereby the federal government will borrow money from the chartered banks, free of interest, without causing inflation.

Outline Of Plan

1. Let every depositor in the banks from the deposit accounts one his chequing or demand account and the other his savings account. The savings deposit account will not be directly spendable as he will not be permitted to issue cheques against it. Before using any of his savings he must first give the bank 90 days notice and then the bank will be required the money to his demand account. Therefore, the money in actual circulation and being used for the medium of exchange for the nation will be the demand deposits and the currency in the hands of the public outside the banks. The savings deposits will be held as a contingent source of funds for the individual depositors and as a reserve against the public debt.

2. Let the federal government maintain a tax of 2% per annum, payable half yearly, on the demand deposits and on currency in circulation outside the banks. But there will be no tax on the savings deposits.

3. Whenever the government is required to borrow money to borrow it from the chartered banks free of interest. The government will issue non-interest bonds to the banks as against savings deposits. The banks will no longer pay interest on any deposits.

The tax will be payable 1½% every six months and will be levied on all spendable money, that is on demand deposits and on currency in circulation outside the banks. At the end of the business of the last days of June and December each year the banks will debit every depositor with the sum of 1½% of the average monthly balance at the end of each of the preceding six months, and credit the sum to the government. In order to collect the tax on the currency in circulation outside the banks everyone will be required to file a declaration with a bank giving the amount of cash he has on hand and the tax is due and to pay the tax to the bank. The savings accounts will be immune from the tax.

Borrowing

This plan will make it possible for the government to borrow entirely from the chartered banks and from no other source, free of interest, as against savings deposits. The government will be required to do so. The government will no longer sell any securities to the public but will also make it possible to refund the total public debt of Canada on a non-interest basis as outstanding issues of government securities mature, without repudiation, and both the government and the people will be relieved of the tremendous interest charge now under the present fiscal policy.

Everyone will decide for himself how much spendable money he will keep on the average of his demand account and as each on hand to m e t his medium-of exchange needs and, since he must pay the tax on the average of the monthly balances in his demand account, he will naturally deposit in his savings account what excess income he receives over his requirements each month. The people collectively will receive an excess of income over their spendings and are saving their taxes of the same amount as the government spends of borrowed money. The more savings the people of Canada for any period of time is this excess of income over spending, the more they spend this excess because all their civilian expenditures are made without tax. Someone must save this excess. Therefore, those who actually save money will undoubtedly deposit it in their savings accounts as fast as they save it in order to avoid the tax which they would have to pay on it if they kept it in their demand accounts. In the savings of the nation, therefore, will be automatically kept out of circulation by the tax.

Non-Interest Bonds

During this year, under the plan, the government would issue to the banks an average of $5,000,000 a day of non-interest bonds and the banks would create and credit the government with $5,000,000 a day of bank money. We say that the government borrows this money from the banks.

The government would spend the borrowed money with the people and the people would save an equal amount out of the current national income. The people would receive $5,000,000 a day of excess income over all their civilian expenditures and after paying their taxes; and, in order to avoid the 3% per annum tax, would deposit the excess income in their savings accounts.

The savings accounts will not be a liability against the banks because the banks will always hold federal bonds, at least dollar for dollar, with the savings. The banks will receive the non-interest bonds from the government and create credit, or bank, money. The government will spend the money with the people, thus putting it into circulation. But the people will take it out of circulation themselves and hold it in their savings accounts.

Therefore, as soon as this borrowed money has performed its function of financing the part of government expenditures which is not paid for by taxation it will be withdrawn from circulation and, therefore, will not cause inflation.

Instead of the people putting their savings into government securities and holding the securities they will keep them in their savings deposits out of circulation and the banks will hold the securities for them.

Bookkeeper

The banks will hold both the non-interest bonds and the savings deposits, the bonds offsetting the deposits While the people, through their deposits, will owe the banks for the bonds, the banks will owe the people the amount of the deposits. The banks will hold the savings deposits as security against the bonds. The banks will act as it were as a bookkeeper, or treasurer, for both the people and the government.

The savings deposits as a whole will be frozen. They will not be directly spendable But the individual depositor will be able to use his savings at any time he wishes. By giving his bank 90 days notice he can have money transferred from his savings account to his demand account; or, if he needs the money at once, he may borrow from the bank as against his savings, the same as anyone now may borrow on a government bond that he holds. Each depositor may thus use his savings without causing inflation, because as he spends his savings other depositors will receive them and put them into their savings accounts. The 3% tax on all spendable money will keep savings removed from active circulation, to meet their ordinary medium-of-exchange needs. They will draw on their savings only for unforeseen contingencies

Under the proposed plan the government will borrow only from the chartered banks and be free from interest. It will stop selling interest-bearing bonds, treasury bills, savings certificates, stamps or other securities to the public. Besides avoiding interest charges on all future borrowings the government will save the tremendous costs of issuing and selling securities to the public and the bookkeeping and other clerical work in connection with them. Instead, whenever the government is required to borrow money, non-interest bonds will be issued to the banks and bank money will be created and credited to the government by the banks who be paid for their services.

Public Debt

The total public debt of Canada, federal, provincial and municipal, will be gradually reduced on a non-interest basis without repudiation As outstanding Dominion securities mature the federal government will borrow the money from the banks free of interest and redeem them. The federal government will also arrange with the provincial governments to advance them the necessary funds, free of interest. so that all provincial and municipal securities may be redeemed as they mature.

The total public debt amounts now to 10,000 million and carries an average interest charge of other charges on the debt amount now to fully $400,000,000 a year, and will increase every year under the present fiscal policy. Under the proposed plan, as the debt is refunded by the non-interest bonds these charges will be gradually lessened until they will be finally eliminated and both the government and the people will be relieved from the absurdity of forcing the people to pay money in taxes simply to pay it back to them as interest.

Once the interest charges on the public debt have been eliminated there will be no trouble in the government collecting sufficient revenue from taxation not only to pay as we go but to gradually redeem the debt itself.

Aid Doctors and Nurses

By DR. THOMAS PARRAN, SURGEON-GENERAL, U.S. PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE.

It has been suggested that the wartime service of every doctor and nurse in the United States be placed under the control of the Manpower commission. A great deal can be done by the individual and the family to make the best of things.

In the first place, every housewife should take advantage of the training given by the Red Cross in first aid, home nursing and nutrition. Such training, of course, does not fit them to take the place of professional nurses, but it does fit them to give more intelligent care to their families when illness strikes and to the minimum of professional supervision.

Patients can do much to save doctors' time by calling the office before they become a source of focal infection. Immunizations against contagious disease should be administered before disease appears. We should keep the simple rules of health.

All of us must be willing to forego the luxuries and refinements of peace and release for military or community duty. Every woman not working outside her home should consider now to learn how to take care of her own children and other members of her household In many communities, young women are not able to get or to afford any help are banding together to organize day nurseries for the care of their own children and those of mothers with full time jobs.

Everyone has said that the air-raid warden and his helpers have brought a greater feeling of neighborliness into our large cities than has ever existed before. We need the same neighborliness on the health front. The danger of disease and epidemic, and the necessity of being prepared against it, is equally as urgent as the preparation against bombs. The woman with her home-nursing certificate should not wait until illness appears in her own family. She and her neighbors should organize to be available to one another whenever any one of them is in need. The woman with free time should take the training of the nurse's aide, many more of whom are needed in our understaffed hospitals. Local groups of women should interest themselves in the training of housekeeping aides—the combination of practical nurse and housewarker—and making them available among the families with small incomes.

We have hardly begun to feel the impact of war upon our health and medical problems and in the cities it has been a matter of inconvenience rather than deprivation so far. The pressure is coming soon, however.

Somewhat under the influence of good fellowship, a sailor tried to enter a restaurant by a revolving door. Each time he made the complete round and found himself in the street again. After several attempts he sat on the pavement to work things out. A moment later an Army officer walked to the door and went in. The door went round and an officer of the R.A.F. came out. The inebriated sailor stared. "Strike me pink," he muttered. "Now, what did he do with his army clothes?"

Tories Open Meet Behind Closed Doors

OTTAWA, Oct. 6—(CP)—A committee of Conservatives charged with the task of planning for a national party convention met behind closed doors here today under chairmanship of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen of Toronto, their national leader.

Not all the expected 35 committee members were in attendance when the meeting began. First order of business was consideration of the report of an interim convention committee which drafted preliminary plans at a recent meeting here.

ONE-DAY AFFAIR

It was expected the committee session would be a one-day affair. Discussion would centre on the number and classes of delegates to attend the national convention—likely to be held in Winnipeg in the first week of December—and the convention agenda.

Mr. Meighen entered the Conservative caucus room on Parliament hill, accompanied by H. R. Milner, K.C., of Edmonton, chairman of the interim convention committee and of a recent Conservative laymen's conference at Port Hope, Ont.

Conservative House Leader Hanson was to have arrived in Ottawa last night for the meeting but was not among the early arrivals at the meeting room.

French-Canadian Fliers in Action

By DOUGLAS AMARON

WITH THE R.C.A.F., SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Oct. 6—(CP)—The French-Canadian bomber squadron of the R.C.A.F., made its first operational flight over enemy territory during the night. The target airmen of this newest unit of the expanding Canadian Air Force attacked was not disclosed immediately.

Led by their youthful dark-haired commanding officer, Wing Cmdr. Joe St. Pierre of St. Eustache-Sur-Le-Lac, Que., the airmen swept over western Germany, flying through storms and icing conditions on both outward and homeward journeys.

Most of the squadron's aircraft were obliged to fly at lower altitudes than usual as a result of the unfavorable weather, except for which, crew members reported, the flight would have been little difference from a routine flight.

German Refugees Going to Athens

ANKARA, Oct. 4.—(Delayed)—(AP)—Greek sources said today that 10,000 German refugees from the Rhineland areas bombed by the R.A.F. are expected soon in Athens. Several streets in Athens were declared evacuated on German orders to provide housing.

Writer Dies

Miss Cora Hind, dean of Canadian newspaper women, who died at Winnipeg, Tuesday. She was 81 years old. Suffering a stroke Monday night, she failed to rally and sank rapidly.

E. Cora Hind, Noted Expert On Crops, Dies

WINNIPEG, Oct. 6.—(CP)—Miss E. Cora Hind, 81, dean of newspaperwomen in Canada and world authority on agriculture and livestock died today. She suffered a stroke last night.

Miss Hind, who came to Winnipeg in 1882, joined the staff of the Winnipeg Free Press in 1901 as market and agricultural reporter. Within a short time she was named agriculture and commercial editor, a position she held for many years.

She became internationally through her accuracy in forecasting Canada's grain crops.

DID WAR WORK

Miss Hind, who retired as Free Press Agriculture Editor in 1935, continued to write a weekly column on western agricultural developments, while she also was active in war work, providing comforts for many newspapermen now overseas with Canada's armed forces.

Born in Toronto, she had been active in newspaper work until her death.

After she relinquished her newspaper post she went on a two-year world tour that took her to all important agricultural countries of the world.

Miss Hind later visited London during and following the coronation of King George VI and attended the International Institute of Agriculture in Rome.

On her return from the tour, she again continued her daily office routine.

WROTE TWO BOOKS

Miss Hind was a familiar sight, arriving early each morning at her office. She wrote two books about her tour and it wasn't until 1939, at the age of 79, that she began to show signs of failing health.

She was the first woman to be given the privilege to enter the trading floor of Winnipeg grain exchange during trading sessions and the male hat she wore became a familiar sight.

Miss Hind lived alone for many years in an apartment in the west end and had no immediate relatives here.

cates that it is weakening, which it undoubtedly is in the fourth year of what the Germans were told would be a short and easy war.

That is not to say that German morale is breaking, but hardships apparently are having their effect and it is likely to be cumulative.

The German people will not starve this winter, that is certain. But there are other things tending to wear down their resistance. The frightful casualties being suffered in Russia cannot be concealed from them.

HEAVY TOLL

British and American mass bombings are taking a heavy toll of German cities, with an inevitable loss of civilian life, although that is not the object of the raids.

This comes to a people who had been reassured by Goering himself that they would never be bombed as Britain was. Goering had to admit that the German Luftwaffe is tied up in Russia and could not retiliate on Britain now.

The best he could promise was that when Russia is defeated, Britain's turn will come again. That would seem to be cold comfort with Russia still very much in the war and virtually certain to be in it all winter.

Added to its troubles on the home front, the Germans are faced with increasing difficulties among the occupied and even the satellite countries. They also have the constant fear of a second front, as seems evidenced by a reported "invasion alert" along the Norwegian coast.

SERIOUS OPPOSITION

Serious opposition has arisen in Norway, and trouble apparently is brewing also in Denmark, hitherto a comparatively docile if unhappy country.

German efforts to force slave labor out of France to add to the 6,000,000 quota of enforced labor already drawn from the subjected peoples also is encountering difficulty. News that 10 high officials of the French labor ministry have resigned in protest and that the labor recruiting bureau at Lyons had been bombed is symptomatic. It indicates that the spirit of Unoccupied France has not been entirely broken.

Farm Machines To be Sold on Ration Basis

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—(CP)—Rationing of all new farm machinery and equipment was announced last night by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, effective Tuesday.

A board statement said the order is designed to obtain fair distribution of all types of farm machinery and equipment, manufacture of which has been drastically cut in order to divert steel to war industries.

It outlined this procedure to be followed by a farmer to prove his need for new equipment. He must file a statement showing the number of acres in crop on his farm, the number in summerfallow, the number of horses, cattle and sheep which he owns and a full description of similar usable equipment which he now has.

TRADE-IN CLAUSE

If a trade-in is involved, the farmer must give a full description of the old machine and state whether or not it can be repaired. If it can be put back into service again, he will be asked for the reason he is trading it in. Complete reasons will be required also if a farmer is changing over from machinery suitable for horses, mules or oxen to power equipment.

Briefly, the new ration plan calls for the filing of essentiality applicants prepared by farmers, countersigned by the local dealers, reported on by the branch managers of the various implement companies and finally approved by the board through its regional offices.

The order provides that no one may make more than one application for any equipment by entering an application through another dealer.

DEALERS ACCOUNTABLE

The statement said dealers will be accountable to the administrator of farm and construction machinery and municipal services equipment for all new farm machinery and equipment in their possession on Oct. 6 and for all new pieces arriving after that date, and will be responsible for obtaining the completed application form from customers.

When a trade-in is involved, the dealer is required to state how soon the old machine can be reconditioned if it is possible to repair it or alternatively to undertake that it will be turned in for scrap.

OPINION OF MAKER

It added: "Before sending the application forms to the nearest regional office of the board of approval, the manufacturer must state whether or not he can supply the article ordered and give his opinion on essentiality in the light of his knowledge of the needs of the territory. Final approval or rejection of the applications will be dealt with at the board's offices.

Applications and permits will be required for all deliveries after the effective date of the order, notwithstanding prior contracts. The only types of new farm machinery and equipment excepted from the rationing order are attachments, repair and spare parts, tracklaying type tractors, irrigation or drainage equipment, hand tools and milk cooler refrigeration units."

Last night's rationing order supplements a board regulation passed a few days ago whereby the manufacture and importation of new farm machinery was reduced in some cases down to as low as 25 per cent. of 1942 figures. The quota of repair parts was increased over that in effect during the past season.

Ralston Sees Army Training

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Oct. 6—(CP)—Col. J. L. Ralston, Canadian minister of national defence, paid a second visit today to Canadian reinforcement units and saw the training of machine-gunners, men manning mortar carrier, mechanics, engineers and armored troops.

Later, he returned to London and with Hon. C. D. Howe, Canadian minister of munitions and supply, was a luncheon guest of Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian high commissioner to the United Kingdom.

Other guests included Vice-Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, chief of the combined operations command, Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the imperial general staff, Air Marshal Sir Arthur Harris, chief of the bomber command, and Oliver Lyttelton, British minister of production.

British Bombers Attack Germany

LONDON, Oct. 6.—(CP)—A "strong force" of R.A.F. bombers attacked objectives in western Germany last night, an authoritative source said today.

It was the third night raid on Germany this month. Flensburg and the Rhineland were the targets in raids last Thursday and Friday nights.

Ten planes were lost, an indication on the basis of previous averages that 200 planes made the raid.

Other R.A.F. formations swept across the south coast in a steady procession during the night and attacked the occupied Channel coast. Explosions and flashes were heard and seen on the British coast.

The United States never has recognized the Japanese-dominated state of Manchukuo, set up in 1932.

Preview and Review Of Sport

By Hal Dean

Sports Editor of The Edmonton Bulletin

AND now that the World Series is once more safely tucked away in the old mothballs, fans all over the continent—and every city, town, village, hamlet and even rural area has 'em by the basketful—can now settle down again to the humdrum things of life and wonder just what the next one will be like.

In many respects the series just closed will rank highest in the interest of ball fans, chiefly because it was between a club not even seriously considered until quite recently and then only to the extent of being perhaps just a trifle livelier sacrifice offered up on baseball's altar to the all-consuming Yankees.

Edmonton fans probably felt just about the same way as they did elsewhere, regardless of the fact that today there are plenty of "if, told-you-so's" around. Even the most rabid National League sympathizer didn't have very much to hang a Cardinal victory upon, until Ernie White started to slay the Yanks in the third game.

Perhaps the strangest feature about the classic was the complete flop of both Ernie Bonham and Morton Cooper, undoubtedly their respective league's top flingers. The Card ace even more so than Bonham just didn't have it for the series, his earned run average per game turning out to be 5.54. The Yankee star's was 3.27.

Both clubs, noted as strong finishers were consistent in that respect, the Cardinals sticking to the ninth innings as their favorite and scoring a total of eight runs in their final sessions. The fourth was their next best with seven. The Yanks showed a preference for the eighth, cashing in for six runs in that inning and getting five in the sixth cantos.

AVENUE CO-OPERATES

THE Alberta Avenue Club's invitation to the city's curling "orphans" will no doubt be very much appreciated by those followers of the roarin' game who are now rinkless.

Last winter the Edmonton Club turned over two sheets of ice to the Thistle boys who lost their home when the Exhibition grounds were turned over to the Air Force. And now the Edmonton Club's premises are doing their bit in the war effort, leaving only Alberta Avenue, Granite and Royal rinks to operate for the coming season.

The Alberta Avenue curlers are very anxious to accommodate as far as their facilities will permit, all players from other clubs now without ice and their secretary, J. W. Murphy, suggests that all members and any one else desiring to join should immediately get in touch with the membership chairman, Gordon Bunnin (phone 71728).

LEAFS PLAY R.C.A.F.

IT'S SIMPLY a case of "in" or "out" for the Maple Leafs in tonight's junior football clash with No. 3 "M" Depot. Unless the blue and whiters turn in a victory they will have no further interest in the playoffs. On the other hand, the Airmen either have to win tonight or else defeat the E.A.C. on Friday to secure a playoff berth.

George Coward, bowling with the Spark Plugs in the Monday Mixed League at the Rec last night, registered the highest single for the season—a 405. High scoring is of course nothing much of a novelty for George, although his best effort last season was 401.

Bob Carse is leaving for Hibbing at the end of the week, to begin workouts once again with the Chicago Black Hawks. . . . Archie Ritchie, formerly with the Eskimos in the Western Football Conference and now a member of the city police force, has joined the Navy and awaiting his call.

Biggest Share to Ruffing

Yankees Crash Records Despite Result of Series

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Although New York Yankees lost the world series, they carried off the lion's share of the records that were set or equalled during the five-game tussle with St. Louis Cardinals.

Charley Ruffing, the Yank's veteran pitcher, established three records and tied another; little Phil Rizzuto equalled a few more; Joe DiMaggio picked up a couple and the Yanks as a club labored in still more record-breaking.

Both teams, of course, shared in the financial record-breaking as the largest crowds in world-series history turned out for the three games at Yankee Stadium.

When Ruffing pitched no-hit ball for 7 2-3 innings of the opening game, he not only broke the mark of 7 1-3 hitless innings set by Herb Pennock in 1927, but by appearing in his seventh world series, he tied a record set by Waite Hoyt for the Yanks and Athletics from 1921 to 1931. At the same time he won his seventh series victory, going one ahead of Hoyt. Chief Bender of the Athletics and Lefty Gomez of the Yanks. Monday Ruffin the Red broke the total strikeout mark by whiffing his 61st world series victim. Bender's old mark was 59.

RIZZUTO IN SPOTLIGHT

Three of Rizzuto's record-equaling feats were in the field as he made 15 putouts in a five-game series and seven of them in one game and had three assists in the second inning of the third game. His feat of hitting a home run to start yesterday's game also established a record, made in 1917 by George Weaver of Chicago White Sox.

DiMaggio had 20 putouts in the five games. That gave him a record for putouts, one above his 1941 total, and equalled the record for outfielders' chances in a five-game series, set by Mike Donlin of the Giants in 1905 and equalled by DiMag last year.

Other Yankee records included Bill Dickey's batting caught in 33 world series games since 1932. Charley Keller's two home runs—equalling the highest mark for a five-game series although Babe Ruth once hit four in four games; the club's total of 178 at bats in five games, 3 more than the most made by a loser in five games); their failure to hit even one triple and their using 20 players in five games.

TWO HITS IN ONE INNING

For the Cards, Stan Musial's feat of coming to bat twice in one inning on two different occasions gave him a record and he equalled another by making two hits in the fourth inning of the fourth game. Max Lanier's two errors in the ninth inning of the opening game tied the mark for pitchers.

The old attendance record of 68,540 and the single-game gate receipts mark of $265,396, set by the Yanks and Dodgers last year, were broken in all three games at the stadium. The high marks of 69,902 fans and $269,408 were hit Sunday.

Total attendance of 267,717 also set a five-game mark, far above the Yanks-Giants 1937 total of 238,142, and the total gate receipts of $1,103,240 also a mark for a series in which the $100,000 radio receipts were not included.

REDBIRDS WIN 47 OF LAST 57 GAMES

St. Louis Cardinals a Truly Great Ball Club

Copping Title Merely Climax To Great Drive

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP)—If there were not for the probability that the war will break it up, the St. Louis Cardinals club that wrecked the Yankees might, within the next few years, go tearing on to win ranking with the greatest teams in baseball history.

It is a son-of-a-gun of a baseball club—much better than anyone suspected even when it was running wild in the closing stages of the National League race. There is no team in either league at this time with anything approaching the all-around punch, pitching and polish of the new world champions.

On the off chance that somebody might think we are going overboard on the bold young men of manager Billy Southworth, a few figures might be in order:

Through yesterday's deciding game at the Stadium, which was won by 4-2 on a two-run homer by George Kurowski, rookie third baseman, in the ninth inning, the Cardinals won 47 of their last 57 contests in the 1942 season. That comes to an altitudinous winning average of .824 down the stretch.

LOSE ONE OF LAST 11

They slugged and slashed their way to victory in their last six straight games in the league race, paused only to drop the opening world series game in St. Louis, and then battered the Yankees into submission in four straight. Some time, some team might have set a record that looks comparable in print, but forgive us if we doubt that the competition was as tough as that bowled over by the Cardinals in their amazing drive to the top.

It is doubtful the Brooklyn Dodgers could have beaten the Yankees. They lacked pitching. As the series unfolded it became obvious that the Cardinals not only had all the dash and color which had become their hallmark, but that they also possessed great pitching in quantity. Mort Cooper their biggest winner, was slugged from the box twice by the Yanks, yet they had the men who could take up the slack in Johnny Beazley, Ernie White and Max Lanier.

BEAZLEY SERIES HERO

Beazley, the solemn 23-year-old rookie from Nashville, who defeated the Yankees in the second game to square the series, and then came back to clinch the championship yesterday, probably deserved to be called the series hero. He pitched two great games and showed an astonishing store of poise for a youngster.

But the Cardinal line-up was studded with heroes. It strictly was a team victory they scored over the Yankees. Take Kurowski, the rookie third sacker from Reading, Pa. His game winning blow yesterday was little more important than the triple he smacked in the second game to drive in a run and throw the Yankees into a tantrum of umpire-baiting from which they never recovered.

Or Terry Moore, the team's great captain and centre-fielder. In the course of the series he made two of the most spectacular catches ever seen on any field to stifle Yankee rallies and generally lend support to the claim of his admirers that he is the equal of Joe DiMaggio. He at least wrestled DiMaggio to a clean draw in the play-off. He singled and later scored the sixth-inning run that tied the count at 2-2 yesterday and set the stage for Kurowski's winning wallop.

SAVES TWO GAMES

Or Enos Slaughter, who saved two games with marvellous plays, one a Dead-Eye Dick peg to third base from right field and the other a leaping catch of what should have been a home run by Charley Keller.

Yesterday, to top off his fine performance, he slugged a fourth inning home run into the deep right field stands off Red Ruffing to equalize a four-bagger with which little Phil Rizzuto had greeted Beazley in the opening round.

And then there was White, the southpaw, who blanked the Yankees 2-0 in the third game, and Walker Cooper, who out-starred Bill Dickey behind the plate throughout the series, climaxing his efforts with a snap peg that caught Joe Gordon off second base and choked off a threatening Yankee rally in the ninth inning yesterday.

Each contributed exactly the right amount to the triumph. For the most part, they did not display the distance hitting qualities of the Yankees, but each of them seemed to hit or come up with a great play when it was needed most. Collectively, they gave an exhibition to be remembered.

RIZZUTO TOP YANKEE

As for the Yankees, they simply ran into a bunch of game, hard-fighting, hungry youngsters who had their number. After they won the second game at St. Louis, the Cardinals actually believed they would take three straight at the Stadium here, and said so.

The most inexplicable collapse of the classic was contributed by Joe Gordon, the Yank second baseman. Hero of the '41 series, when he practically beat Brooklyn single-handed, Gordon made

World's Champions Celebrate Victory

By CHARLES DUNKLEY

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Billy Southworth, manager of the triumphant St. Louis Cardinals, achieved the ambition of his life Monday when his rabbit-running daredevils won the world's series championship for him. He was the happiest man in baseball.

Joseph Vincent McCarthy, 56-year-old leader of the vanquished New York Yankees, was the saddest. His Bombers had been crushed into world series defeat for the first time since 1925. The blow was severe.

To the accompaniment of shrieks, yells and hair pulling the Cardinals engaged in a boisterous victory celebration that did not subside until 30 minutes later.

After handshaking and backslapping, the whooping players swarmed around their little manager and hoisted him on their shoulders in the dressing room.

EVEN LANDIS HOISTED

Judge Landis, commissioner of baseball, shouldered his way into the crowd. He was instantly grabbed and hoisted toward the ceiling. They spotted Ford Frick, president of the National League, ripped his hat to pieces, and boosted him on their shoulders.

The next victim was George (Whitey) Kurowski, sensational 23-year-old rookie third baseman, whose home run in the ninth inning, scoring Walker Cooper ahead of him, settled everything. That blast earned $6,192.50 for each Cardinal. The players hugged and pounded Kurowski on the back and then hoisted him on their shoulders.

Branch Rickey, vice-president and general manager of the Cards, joined Kurowski up in the air and they engaged in a hair-pulling contest.

When Kurowski's cleated shoes only two hits in 21 times at bat against Cardinal pitching and didn't shine particularly in the field. He and Phil Rizzuto did not make their first double play until the final game, whereas they stymied Brooklyn with seven a year ago.

Little Rizzuto played the best all-around game for the Yanks, hammering eight hits in the five games and fielding cleverly all the way.

hit the concrete again, the players grabbed him by the seat of the pants and ripped off the back of his trousers. Pieces of his pants were torn into shreds by the players who clamored for souvenirs.

McCarthy, without going to his dressing room first, marched directly into the clubhouse of his conquerors.

"Bill," he said to Southworth, "I want to congratulate you. You have a fine ball club."

Southworth was so excited that he started sentences and never finished them.

"We took them, and we took them decisively," he began. . . It's just grand. Anytime you can beat a ball club like the Yanks. . . . Well, I feel just wonderful. If I felt any better I wouldn't be able to stand it. . . ."

Joe DiMaggio, Ernie (Tiny) Bonham, Robert (Red) Rolfe, and grinning Charley (Red) Ruffing of the vanquished Bombers came in to shake Southworth's hand.

BEAZLEY RESOLVES

Beazley said that when Phil Rizzuto hit a home run on the third ball he pitched to the Yanks in the first inning, he decided then and there to do something about it.

"I said to myself," Beazley related, "I'll be damned if I intend to go back to St. Louis and play some more baseball this year. I started right then to bear down and I never quit."

With the yells from the nearby Cardinal clubhouse invading the privacy of their own locker room, the Yankees went quietly about the business of exchanging their uniforms for street clothes, some of them for the last time until the end of the war.

There was keen disappointment written on the faces of all of them. Even old-timers like Billy Dickey had little to say.

"They're a good ball club and they beat a good club," declared McCarthy on his return to his own little office. "It was a good series all the way through."

Canadiens Pay Cash For Drillon Says "Hap" Day

TORONTO, Oct. 6. (CP)—Coach Clarence (Happy) Day of Toronto Maple Leafs announced here Monday that Gord Drillon, the club's high-scoring right winger, had been sold to Montreal Canadiens "in a straight cash deal involving no other players."

Day, who negotiated the deal, would give no indication of the amount of money Leafs got for their one-time star, who fell into disfavor with the Leaf management during the Stanley Cup final against Detroit Red Wings last spring.

"I don't know where that yarn started." Day commented on a report that Canadiens would send several young players to the Leafs in exchange for Drillon, 27-year-old veteran of five seasons with the Leafs.

Drillon, league scoring leader for the 1939-40 season, will report to Coach Dick Irvin here next week.

A Leaf player since 1936-37, Drillon was benched in the Stanley Cup playoffs last spring and since that time his name has been frequently linked with various N.H.L. clubs.

Drillon, who with Syl Apps as centre helped form one of the league's highest goal-scoring lines, was one of the greatest goal-getters in modern hockey in his own right.

In the five seasons he was with the Leafs, Drillon marked up 127 goals and 117 assists. His best season was 1937-38 when he tallied 26 times, with the same number of assists.

Even his poorest season—his first—Drillon was good. That was in 1936-37 when he scored 16 goals and 17 assists. He ended last season with the Leafs for 23 goals and 21 assists.

Drillon, a native of Moncton, N.B., turned pro in 1936-37, lining up with Syracuse stars of the Canadian American League. His last amateur club was the Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets of the old International League.

Boxla Playoffs Start Wednesday

TORONTO, Oct. 6 — (CP) — Coach Gordon Spring led his New Westminster Saimonbellies into town Monday night for the Mann Cup final and Canadian Mimico-Brampton Combines, and said "my boys can take care of themselves."

That was as far as he would go in commenting on the Dominion final, which opens Wednesday night. The Salmonbellies had just eliminated the Quebec title-holders from Lachine.

New Westminster will go into the Canadian final without the service of Art Mathewson, one of their stars who suffered a dislocated shoulder in the first game of the series with Lachine. A replacement will be on hand from New Westminster.

South Siders Win 13-5

Scona Hi Bantams Snap Westglens Unbeaten String

Only one game was played in the bantam division of the high school football yesterday. However, this lone tilt produced somewhat of an upset as Scona defeated the hitherto unbeaten Westglen squad 13-5.

Another game was scheduled between Sep and Vic, but the former's inability to field a team resulted in the latter gaining the two points by default.

Playing at the South Side Athletic grounds, the Scona gang showed a complete disregard for the West Enders' reputation. They even spotted the losers an early touchdown, but they came bouncing back to cop the verdict.

Westglen started off like sure winners and soon gained the scoreboard as Ron Fitch plunged from Scona's one yard line for five points. They had advanced to this point mainly on the strength of a long forward pass which Alex Fallow had caught.

The lead was shortlived however, and Hugh Buchanan put the South Siders on even footing as he ran ten yards for a major count. He also kicked the convert to put his team in front.

In the second quarter, Don Gerlitz hoisted a long punt to Jack Brown standing behind Westglen's goal line and Eric Roberts rouged him to further increase the winner's margin.

A Bruce Cormack to Fee Brennan pass put the game on ice for the South Siders late in the third frame, Brennan caught the oval on the loser's five yard line and went over the rest of the distance unmolested. Cormack made his placement kick good for the convert.

In the last quarter Westglen in a desperate attempt to pull the game out of the fire opened wide up. However they met with little success against a stubborn Scona team.

LINEUPS

Scona—Don Gerlitz, Eric Roberts, Hugh Buchanan, Bill Rea, Bruce Cormack, Bill Walters, Bruce MacDougall, Nelles Christianson, Fee Brennan, Stacey Saston, Jack Cook.

Westglen—Lloyd Faibish, Clem Kerr, Murdo Munro, Gordon Dahl, Alex Fallow, Jack Brown, Ron Fitch, Buckey Stevenson, Cam Young, Jack Brown, Eric MacDonald, Jim Wood.

Officials—Gordon Proctor and Ken Lucas.

Six Other Clubs Also to Share in Big Series Pool

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Each member of St. Louis Cardinals, 1942 world series champions, got $6,192.50 for his five afternoons of work, while each member of New York Yankees, American League kingpins and the champions of 1941, received $3,351.76.

The players share in the receipts from the first four games with 70 per cent of the pool going to the competing teams on a 60-40 per cent basis. The remaining 30 per cent of the pool goes to the first division clubs in each league.

The pool this year totalled $427,-579.41, with the 70 per cent for the two clubs $299,304.59. Of this $179,582.75 went to the winning Cardinals, who divided their melon into 28 full shares and five one-fifth shares.

The Yankees divided their purse into 33¾ parts after taking $6,600 off the top for cash awards to club house boys, former teammates in the service and bat boys.

Brooklyn's Dodgers and Boston Red Sox, runners-up respectively in the National and American Leagues, each got $32,968.46 to divide among the players while New York Giants and St. Louis Browns drew down $21,378.97 each. Cincinnati and the Cleveland Indians were rewarded with $10,-989.49.

Today's Sport Parade

By Jack Cuddy

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(BUP)—In cleaning up the press box after the World Series, we discovered that: Phil "Scotter" Rizzuto of the Yanks, smallest player in the classic, walked off with the biggest batting average, .381. We hope he bats that well against the Japs after joining the navy soon. . . .

Meanwhile Joe "Flash" Gordon, star of the 1941 Dodgers-Yanks series, became the goat in this one, getting only two hits in 21 trips to the plate, and being thrown out in costly fashion in the ninth inning of the final contest.

YOUNG "TRACK TEAM"

CASEY STENGEL of the Braves insists the Cards are a "track team," not a ball club. He says they're so bloomin' fast on the bases that, one day at Braves field, Johnny Hopp walked, and when the pitcher pulled his cap a bit tighter "and looked up to watch Hopp, he learned to his dismay that Johnny was on third." The pitcher was hopping mad, he added.

The Cards were the youngest team ever to win the series and, likely, the lowest salaried outfit to turn the trick in 20 years. It is reported that no player on the club gets more than $10,000 a year and that most of them get less than half that. To some of those "chain-gangers," the $2,841 difference between a winning player's share and a loser's cut looked almost like a year's salary. No wonder the money-hungry lads were inspired.

Al Schact, clown prince of baseball, was asked, "What's wrong with the Yanks in this series?" Schact replied, "The Cards." Anyway, it will be a relief not to hear the cries of "break up the Yanks," it seems the war, the years and the Cards have taken pretty good care of that.

HOMER FOR A MARINE

WHITEY KUROWSKI belted out that series-clinching homer partially for the benefit of the Marines, or at least for one Marine—his kid brother, who wrote Whitey after the first series game in which the Redbird fanned three times. The letter expressed elation that the cards were in the series but requested: "Don't strike out three times again. Please. You'll make me the laughing stock of the platoon." . . . That future Marine, Johnny Beazley, started the Cards on their four straight series string and finished it. . . . Incidentally, the Cards proved good finishers, scoring in their last inning of every game in the classic . . . They didn't have to bat in the ninth inning of the second tilt at St. Louis.

Lefty Gomez, who didn't appear in the series, was donning his civvies in the Yanks dressing room after the finale when a reporter said, "Tough luck, Lefty." Senor Gomez gazed innocently at the reporter and asked, "Why?—what did I do?"

Dodger officials and some supporters were so vociferous in charging that Cincinnati was making it easy for the Cards to win in the pennant stretch that we expect any day now to hear the Brooklynites accusing the Yanks of stuffing off the series just to make the Cards look good and show up the Flatbushers, who took a licking from the Yanks last year.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 6.—(CP)—The touring Royal Air Force soccer team from North Battleford, Sask., came from behind Monday to defeat the 58th Coast Battery squad 3-2 in their second exhibition match here. They lost a 5-1 decision to a coast league all-star outfit Saturday.

The airmen now move to Victoria where they will meet a R.A.F. team from Patricia Bay.

Giants Also Did it Twice

Cry to "Break Up Yankees" Finally Heeded by St. Louis

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Wrapping up the World Series for another year, and possibly longer, it was a long time coming, but the world champion St. Louis Cardinals finally accomplished what many were advocating years ago—"break up the Yankees."

The honor of beating the Yanks twice in world series competition now shared by the Cardinals and New York Giants. . . . The Cards also handed the Bombers their last series defeat in 1926, while the Giants turned them back in the 1921 and 1922 classics.

If you're wondering why Manager Joe McCarthy didn't order Whitey Kurowski passed intentionally in the ninth inning yesterday, with only one out, a man on second and two weak hitters coming up, remember that this same Kurowski fanned the first three times he faced Red-Ruffing in the opening game. . . . When Whitey Kurowski socked his game-winning homer, McCarthy probably was wondering the same thing. . . . The bat he used to new up the series was the only one Kurowski brought from St. Louis, his others having been broken in the regular season. . . . He wouldn't let any of his mates use it in batting practice and after the game he refused to let it out of his sight.

V

The Yankees relied entirely on right-handed pitching, marking the first time since 1922, when they also did it, that a team has gone through a world series without pitching a left-hander.

V

Mel Ott was pleased with the outcome. . . . It was a pleasure for him to watch some team besides his Giants get lambasted by the Cards. . . . The Cards established some kind of a record by scoring in their last turn at bat in every game.

V

Long after the mighty throng had poured from the Stadium following yesterday's final contest, a lone figure emerged and trudged slowly along the street, tired and forlorn in the gathering dusk. . . . A small boy ran up to him, holding out a program. . . . The man stopped and autographed it for the lad. . . . "Who's that?" inquired another youngster who had watched the procedure. . . . "Joe McCarthy," replied the young autograph seeker. . . . McCarthy smiled as two sports writers walked up to extend their condolences. . . . "It ain't so badly," said the manager of the beaten Yankees; "they still want my autograph."

Art Coulter Getting Married

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 6.—(CP)—Art Coulter, now a member of the United States Coast Guard, and last year captain of New York Rangers of the National Hockey League, will be married here Friday to Mrs. Trudy Denton, program editor at Madison Square Garden, New York.

Coulter is 33 and a native of Winnipeg.

V

Emil Van Velzen and Stewart Hart together, Both these boys are widely known in this vicinity and should stage quite a battle.

The semi-final wrestling event will see Leo Magirl and Bill Pirrez clashing. They are both middleweights.

An interesting item on the card is the wrestling match between Malcolm and Eric Wooldridge. These are identical twins but when they climb into the ring there is no love lost between them.

Seven other good boxing and wrestling events have been arranged.

Wrestling, Boxing At Cloverdale Hall Tomorrow Night

Wednesday night at Cloverdale Community hall a mixed wrestling and boxing show will be staged. Action will start at 8 p.m.

George Hustler, well-known Edmontonian, who has declared many years of his life towards organizing and sponsoring athletics among the younger people, is in charge of the arrangements. He has lined up an excellent card that promises to be very interesting.

Proceeds from this show will be divided evenly. Half will go toward Christmas hampers for soldiers overseas, with the remainder to the Cloverdale Community League building fund.

Feature attraction of the night will bring heavyweight wrestlers

All-Calgary Line Now a Possibility For Toronto Leafs

CALGARY, Oct. 6.—(CP)—An all-Calgary forward line is in the making for Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League.

When Dave Sweeney Schriner and Lorne Carr leave for Leafs training camp Wednesday night, they will be accompanied by Roy Brandreth, a promising Calgary centre, who played the last two winters with Santa Junior College, Santa Rosa, Calif.

Brandreth, high scorer in every team but one he has played on the past six years, played here as a pee wee, midget and juvenile before joining Santa Rosa. A layoff due to an injury kept him down to runner up in scoring honors with the California club a year ago.

V

Leo Durocher ordered no batting practice when the Brooklyn Dodgers had two days off after losing five straight.

Cleaning the cuff

Joe Gordon must have had that roller-coaster feeling during the World Series. Last year he hit .500 for a record. This year his average was .053. . . . Johnny Beazley started out as an amateur boxer and won three fights in a Nashville Golden Gloves tournament before his mother made him quit. . . . He's still a pretty good fighter on the mound. . . . The Dodgers' Dixie Walker has a new job as recreation director of a big war plant on Long Island. . . . Pilot is Killed In Coast Crash

VICTORIA, Oct. 6.—(CP)—An aircraft of the Royal Air Force crashed against a mountain on nearby Saltspring Island Sunday night, resulting in the death of the pilot, it was announced here yesterday. His name is being withheld by R.A.F. headquarters at Patricia Bay pending notification of his death to next-of-kin.

Can Smoke Now

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Mrs. Mary Winski, 31 and a grandmother, may smoke now without any criticism from her husband, John. An agreement to that effect was reached in court yesterday. John stated that henceforth he wouldn't object if she used tobacco in mod eration. She then withdrew her suit for separate maintenance.

"You women! If you didn't always want change, I would not always be having none."

Sports . . . Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP)—You'd be surprised at how many folks hereabouts think they won't have another chance to see a World Series for a long time . . . Maybe that explains those tremendous crowds at the stadium—the polite handclapping that greeted each Yank as he made his final appearance at the plate yesterday . . . the fans seemed to be saying: "Well, we won't be seeing you again, but you were good guys when you had it."

Probably half of each squad will be in the armed forces before another season. Not Whitey Kurowski's trick arm likely will keep him out . . . It won't make the Yankees any happier if they have to meet him another time . . . Come to think of it, those 23-year-old Cardinal Kids ought to make ball players when they grow up.

V

Today's guest stars:

Frank Graham, New York Sun: "Those who said that the Cardinals would give the Yankees a terrific tussle now are revealed as having been guilty of an understatement."

Ben Wahrman, Richmond News-Leader: "Who would have thought it? . . . Billy Southworth thought it."

V

Expert opinion

Looks as if old Mike Gonzales was the champion series forecaster.

. . . He said: "Maybe we lose one, maybe two, but no more." . . . This department hit the number of games right on the nose—but had the wrong team and plenty of company in picking the Yanks . . . only five of the experts polled by the A.P. before the series named the Cards and no one said fewer than six games for them.

Maple Leafs Play R.C.A.F. Tonight

A mighty important football game is on tap at Clarke Stadium tonight when the Maple Leafs tangle with the R.C.A.F. squad in a junior league fixture. Kick-off time will be 8.30 p.m.

While the result of this contest means a great deal to both clubs yet it means more to the Leafs. The blue and white squad must carve out a victory in order ot keep their dim play-off hopes alive. A loss means that they will have no further interest for the balance of the season.

On the other hand, the Airmen are anxious to clinch the remaining play-off spot in the league finals, the E.A.C. having already gained a berth.

So there should be two battling grid scouts facing each other in this crucial tilt.

The next-of-kin, who are residents in the United Kingdom, have been informed of the accident.

After 15 Years of Racing

Torchy Peden Forsakes Bike To Begin Work in Shipyard

TORONTO, Oct. 6.—(CP)—When Torchy Peden and Cy Bergna, his Paterson, N.J., partner, won the six-day cycle grind at Montreal Saturday night the average sports page reader probably passed over the item with a casual, "I see Peden won another."

The big Victoria redhead has been the man to beat in bike races for so long that even some Canadian fans, who should be mighty proud of him, had taken to sighs of satisfaction when a darkhorse rider let the field. Now Torchy is a shipyards worker with the war effort on his mind and may race no more.

Who knows, they're may be no more six-day grinds for the duration. At any rate Torchy is getting on and the bike marathoner can't last forever.

Peden made himself an internationally famous figure. Fifteen years ago he was an enthusiastic kid pushing his racing bike over Vancouver Island roads in early mornings. He went to the 1928 Olympic Games at Amsterdam and, although he wasn't on hand when they passed out the medals, he determined to plant his name on the sport records as a champion and he did.

Torchy stepped off at many Canadian cities en route back to Victoria from the Olympics. He wasn't brazen about it but he made sure that sports editors in leading newspapers saw his press clippings. Torchy was going places and he wanted to be sure they had his background straight. Then he went back to Victoria and resumed training.

When Big Red was ready he moved to the professional circuit and was a sensation almost from the start. He left many of the big names in a trail of burning rubber and Victoria suddenly realized it had given forth a champion. Victoria, all Canada in fact, became six-day conscious. If the enthusiasm waned a bit it was not Peden's fault for, witness last week's grind, he is still tops. And when he decides permanently to do his sleeping other than in trackside bunks, Canada may well spare a thought for the man who carried her name to the sport centres of the world.

The War Today

BY JOHN COLLINGWOOD READE

General Montgomery, commander of the British Army of the Nile, has made his comment on the successful action carried out by his forces. He said: "We are consolidating our positions, and preparing for the next round." That seems to sum the matter up in the fewest words possible. The action accomplished what was demanded of it by throwing the Germans out of positions which were useful to them and inconvenient to the British.

Inasmuch as the enemy was able to overlook British preparations and interfere with them if necessary, it was necessary to remove him from certain positions at Bir El Munassib. Moreover, the territory which the enemy commanded from these positions was extensive enough to prevent British advanced forces from maintaining continuous and intimate contact with the Germans along an important sector of the line.

The Germans did not like being thrown out, and considered their positions valuable, for they counter-attacked stubbornly and risked precious aircraft in the hope of retaking them. But to no avail. They lost six aircraft, while the R.A.F. escaped scot free. There is nothing particularly significant or very remarkable about the action itself. It was a step that had to be taken, and the fact that it has been taken now, coupled with General Montgomery' remark that he is preparing for the next round, suggests that a major action is imminent and that the British hold the initiative.

EAGER AND CONFIDENT

The desert forces are now strong and well equipped, and despatches from observers convey the impression that all ranks are eager and confident to a greater extent than ever before. Shorter Allied supply routes have been developed; air support has been increased, both positively and in relation to that of the enemy, and the quality of equipment has been improved.

Hitherto, the forces of the Middle East had to be content with a large proportion of equipment that was either too light or obsolete. Much of the equipment available from the United States in the early days of lease-lend was scarcely suitable for use against the Germans. Later models have been improved greatly, and the equipment now reaching the Middle East is believed to be a match for anything the enemy can put in the field.

These past few weeks have not dealt as kindly with Rommel as they have with Montgomery. Axis shipping losses destroyed by Allied aircraft and British submarines have been very heavy, and the Axis pool of shipping has been so seriously depleted by Allied action in all coastal areas that the German authorities are hard pressed to find shipping for all their needs. Whether or not the relative speed of re-equipment, and reinforcement as between the two forces has favored General Montgomery enough to assure superiority over Rommel in all respects, it is fairly certain that the British are now generally stronger.

It would seem, therefore, that the time to attack is close at hand, provided preparations have been completed elsewhere to strike at Rommel's rear and prevent him from leading his forces back into the open desert, where his great mobility and special talents can be displayed to their best advantage and the task of bringing him to action and destroying him made almost impossible.

It is generally felt that the German campaign in Southern Russia is drawing to its close and that the enemy will soon feel able to bring a large part of his air strength into Southeastern Europe either to reinforce Rommel or to support some new venture against Syria or other points on the eastern shore of the Mediterranean Sea. Speedy action in Africa is therefore, urgent, but it is almost equally important that the action shall be decisive.

FINAL STAGES AT STALINGRAD

The final stages of the battle for Stalingrad are developing along the lines that were indicated in this column yesterday. The Germans have driven deeper into the northwestern suburbs of the city, but the jaws of the Russian pincer movement have closed a little tighter. From within the Don bend, near Kletskaya, and down the corridor between the Volga and the Don, the Russians are driving a two-pronged attack into the German north flank, while from within the city and to the southwest the Red Army is developing a two-pronged attack against the German south flank.

If, the defenders within the city itself can hold out long enough these flanking attacks may force the enemy to relax his pressure.

The German supply problem is becoming acute. The concentration of men outside Stalingrad to the number of half a million, together with the forces operating in the upper and central Caucasus, involves the movement each week of several hundred thousand tons of supplies — food, fuel, munitions, forage, and the like, which is a severe strain on the very limited rail facilities available to the Germans from Karkhov and Taganrog, where their primary bases are established. Most of the material must be moved by truck, and it is in this respect that the rainy season of the Southern Ukraine will exert an important influence on the campaign.

The fighting fronts are 600 miles and more from Karkhov, and an unceasing offensive employing 20,000 men in action at a time in each of these battle areas means keeping at least half a million men in the forward lines. These men cannot live on the country, because the Russians have destroyed everything useful, as Hitler himself testified in his speech at the Sports Palace. We can only marvel at the efficiency of the German supply system which has enabled them to maintain their offensive so persistently and with such fury.

Even so, it must have been taxed to the limit and could hardly stand the additional strain of muddy roads and washed-out culverts.

FIGURES TELL STORY

The President of the United States appears to have been gratified by what he saw in the course of his two weeks' inspection trip, which carried him more than eight thousand miles and took him to the scenes of every type of his country's war activity.

Of course, an inspection trip always presents a number of interesting spectacles. Even a plant working at 50 per cent capacity, if it is pouring steel or building aircraft, is an impressive picture. Only the figures tell the story. Mr. Roosevelt reckons that American war production stands at more than 90 per cent of the output demanded. This is impressive, particularly when the quotas set by the President at the beginning of the year were branded by the Axis as fantastic."

Nevertheless, Mr. Donald Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, insists that America has a long way to go before producing what is needed, and several officials have intimated that the nation is still far from producing as much as it is capable of producing.

However, if the United States is producing 90 per cent of the material which the President demanded for this year, the output, when added to Britain's enormous production should have resulted in the accumulation of a tremendous potential force sufficient to strike a staggering blow at the overextended and fatigued military machine of the Axis in Europe.

The problem is to mass the strength where it is needed. The accompanying map shows the world as it really looks from high above the North Pole. The foreshortened appearance of continents like Australia and Africa are a bit misleading, particularly since, as Australia lies below the Equator and most of Africa is in the southern hemisphere, you would not be able to see them at all from the polar lookout.

Still, the map does give a rather clearer and more accurate idea of the distances over which supplies must be transported than can be gained by studying maps drawn on the principle of Mercacator's projection, which is the system used in most atlases.

Rumor Nazis to Soon Proclaim "Great Germany"

BERNE, Switzerland, Oct. 6. — (AP)—Dispatches from Scandinavia reaching the Swiss press yesterday said rumors that a proclamation creating a "Great Germany," to include Holland, Denmark and Norway, is to be expected soon were circulating in Scandinavia, chiefly in German circles.

It was stressed that such reports were distinctly "in the category of rumors," and were being heard most persistently in Norway. Stockholm dispatches said informed opinion in Sweden was that the reports "must not be given too much weight."

Debunker

There are many capes along the shores of Africa, and the Cape of Good Hope is near the southern extremity of that continent, but it is not at the southermost tip. The coastline of Africa continues on southwest for nearly a hundred miles below the Cape of Good Hope and the tip of Africa that is the farthest south is the Cape of Agulhas. This southermost Cape is not as well known as Cape of Good Hope, because the latter is located by the city of Cape Town, a modern metropolis.

Cost-of-Living Index Declines

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—(CP)—A drop of 3-10ths of a point in the official cost-of-living index between Aug. 1 and Sept. 1 was reported Monday by the Dominion bureau of statistics.

The figure at the start of last month was 117.4 or 16.5 per cent above the index of 100.8 at the beginning of the war. Since the July 1 index was issued, the decline has amounted to one-half of one per cent.

No change will be made in compulsory cost-of-living bonuses to Canadian soldiers as a result of the Sept. 1 index drop. Bonuses are adjusted each quarter, with the next change due Nov. 15.

The decline in September (in the index at Sept. 1) was due mainly to lower prices for potatoes. "Lamb and mutton," the bureau said, "These decreases were sufficiently great to overbalance increases for eggs, butter, and oranges, with the result that the food index dropped from 129.6 for Aug. 1 to 128.5 for Sept. 1."

F.D.R. Asks Gifts To Affirm Faith

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Urging his fellow Americans to transform some of their "new buying power into giving power," President Roosevelt declared last night that donations to community and war chests would "affirm before the world our nation's faith in the inalienable right of every man to a life of freedom, justice and decent security."

He spoke in a radio program launching the 1942 community mobilization for human needs, in which gifts for foreign war relief and community relief services will be accepted in more than 600 United States cities.

He recognized that war needs are exacting a heavy toll not alone on fighting fronts and in personal lives but also in the fortunes of everyone. He added, however:

"But your giving will provide not alone strength for our nation at war; but proof, in a world of violence and greed, that the American people keep faith with democracy, that we hold inviolate our belief in the infinite worth of the individual human being."

NOTED DOCTOR REVIEWS MEDICAL FIELD

Standardized Health Program on National Scale Seen

Association President Certain Federal Board To Find Suitable Plan

Some standardized scheme of preventitive medicine and hospitalization for the entire Canadian nation in the not so distant future was predicted by Dr. A. E. Archer, of Lamont, president-elect of the Canadian Medical Association in an address to a public meeting in the Canadian Legion Memorial Hall, Monday night, attended by about 200 persons.

Dr. Archer was one of three outstanding Canadian medical practitioners to speak at the meeting, which was in connection with the annual convention of the Alberta Hospital Association, the business sessions of which are being held at the Macdonald.

Dr. Archer said he foresaw some integrated scheme of health and hospitalization as an outgrowth of the multitude of health and hospitalization schemes now in operation.

Other speakers at the meeting were: Dr. G. Harvey Agnew, of Toronto, secretary of the Canadian Hospital Council and past-president of the American Hospital Association, and Dr. George F. Stephens, Montreal, superintendent of the Royal Victoria hospital, and ex-president of the American Hospital Association.

Dr. A. H. Baker, Calgary, director of the tuberculosis division of the Alberta department of public health, was chairman.

SERIOUS PROBLEM

The medical profession in Canada and the hospitals are face to face with an extremely serious problem as a result of the heavy demands made by the war, all speakers stressed.

Dr. Archer said that Canada was actually short of qualified medical men at the outbreak of war, there being only about 10,000 doctors in the Dominion at the outbreak of hostilities.

About 2,500 are now in uniform, with 547 serving in the R.C.A.F. When one considers that 47 per cent of doctors in Alberta are over 50, a fair idea of the great

THE QUESTION

As an incentive to housewives to go up town for their shopping during the slack hours of the day and thus relieve congestion on street cars during office-going hours in the mornings and during home-coming hours in the late afternoon, it has been suggested that special tickets at 22 or 23 for a dollar be sold for use only during the slack hours. What do you think of the idea?

THE ANSWERS

ALFRED J. SYME, office-boy: It appears to be a plan worth trying. It has its drawbacks however, in that the earmarking of special hours for special rates is going to be a difficult thing to control, especially around the deadlines.

ELIZABETH MILEY, stenographer: There is one huge weakness in such a scheme in that those who use the street cars most often will not have the advantage of the cut rate.

CHARLES EDWARDS, salesman: Such a plan would act as an incentive towards encouraging the use of the street cars even more than at present. This would be a good thing for the war measure because of the potential reduction in the number of autos used for shopping but on the other hand it may create a bigger headache for street railway officials than ever before.

JEAN ENGSTROM, clerk: It is doubtful if the benefits that would be derived from such a plan would be sufficient to offset the added expense of making extra tickets to be used at a possible loss to operation.

Truck Transport For Harvest Help

Co-operating with farmers in the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, the services administration, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, has given authority to these regions to extend permits for the transportation of harvest help by truck up to Nov. 15 Should conditions merit, further extension may be made.

Unusually heavy crops in the prairie provinces must be harvested this season, with shortage of labor, bad weather conditions and the consequent lateness of maturing, have added to the farmers' problems.

Notice of the extension of time during which harvesters may ride to and from operations in trucks has been given to the R.C.M.P.

Getting Around with Jack DeLong

You often read about "demonstrations" in Fascist Italy. We did, and were forced to the conclusion that the Italians are the most "demonstrating" people in the world. Now we know how these demonstrations happen. Al Raymond, veteran foreign correspondent for the New York Herald-Tribune, spent 16 months in Rome. He arrived in Edmonton Monday by plane from the east on his way to the Yukon and points north.

We asked Al about these "demonstrations", Raymond chuckled and told us that all demonstrations in Italy are comic opera stuff, planned by the Fascist party. Students at the universities and schools, who always like a day off from studies, are secured for the demonstration in advance.

The whole thing is very silly, except that it is done for a very serious purpose.

The Fascists want the American people to believe that Italians are furious at America or the American government. So they decide to stage

Sustained mass bombing raids on Italian centres of production would cause the speedy collapse of Italian morale and the will to fight and should be started as soon as militarily possible, as the best means of shortening the war.

This was the view expressed here Monday by Allen "Al" Raymond, veteran foreign correspondent of the New York Herald-Tribune, and now a uniformed, accredited war correspondent with the United States Army.

Mr. Raymond, who is on his way to the Yukon, and other districts north, spent 16 months as the New York Herald-Tribune reporter in Rome, leaving Italy in October of 1941, just two months before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor plunged his own country into the war.

Mr. Raymond will travel north by C.P. Airlines Ltd. plane.

Of Europe in general Correspondent Raymond predicts a grim future. He said:

"Europe will do well to escape the most terrible and bloody anarchy I have seen, in the closing stages of this war as we move in for the final battles. The Germans have aroused the hatreds of centuries, which will come to a head at that time.

"I fear there will be a period of slaughter in Italy, France, Hungary and Germany and possibly Spain, before the struggle finally ends."

Asked if he thought war would come to America he replied:

"I would be greatly surprised if it does not come to America in the form of aerial bombing."

At the same time Mr. Raymond foresees a comparatively bright future for the peoples of North America.

"If the people of America and of the British Isles don't come out of this war much stronger in relation

The Trades Council also endorsed a resolution by Malcolm Ainslie, its vice-president, calling upon the government to release all anti-Fascists providing they are not guilty of any criminal offence or infraction of the law; to provide increased facilities by the department of justice to have these cases dealt with in a more speedy and expeditious manner, and to use the Defence of Canada Regulations more stringently against Fascists and other fifth column elements in Canada.

REBUKES ACTION

Speaking to his motion condemning city council for permitting additional Japanese families to come to Edmonton Mr. Griffin stated that "it was a shame that aldermen should have seen fit to re-open a motion prohibiting Japanese to come to the city. He pointed out that housing accommodation here was at a premium and the permitting of Japanese families to come here would not help the situation." City council had previously passed a blanket resolution prohibiting admission of further Japanese.

Youth Enters Plea of Guilty Wound Charge

A plea of guilty was entered Tuesday in supreme court by a 15 year old Edmonton boy to a charge of wounding another boy with intent to maim. He was remanded until Wednesday morning for sentence by Mr. Justice G. B O'Connor.

It was intimated by J. W. McClung K.C., crown prosecutor that the crown would not object to sentence on the boy being suspended, provided he was placed in St. John's industrial home, Toronto. Counsel for the boy intimated that arrangements had been completed for him to attend this school.

Mr. Justice O'Connor said he would hear medical evidence on the boy's mental condition, and intimated that if that evidence disclosed the boy was not a menace to society he would be placed on probation and sent to the home.

URGE TO HARM

According to statements given the police by the boy, he had felt the urge to harm several of his companions at school, and attacked the boy he injured as they were walking home. The attack took place at 104 avenue and 119 street on June 1 last.

The accused told the officers that he took the boy into the bushes, tied his hands with his belt, and took his victim's belt to tie up his legs. Then, the accused said, "I stabbed him twice on the left breast" the statement disclosed.

After the stabbing the accused released the boy, and threatened that he would harm him again if he told about the assault.

Warns Against Play Near River

Further warning against the practice of permitting children to play on or near the river was issued today by Chief Constable of Matthew Blackwood.

He stated that in spite of warnings, reports of children risking their lives through activities on the waters of the Saskatchewan or along its precarious embankments, continue to come to the police headquarters.

One child already has lost his life and several others have had close calls Chief Blackwood stated. He is requesting especially the co-operation of the parents to keep the boys away from the waters which are unusually high for this time of the year.

Labor Scarce: Coal Shortage Is Predicted

A serious coal shortage is threatened this winter because of scarcity of labor and lower production, F. A. McBain, chairman of the coal committee of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce, stated Tuesday.

He said he had received assurance from Ottawa that the freight bonus on shipments east would be restored as soon as the present shortages in the west are relieved. It is not the intention to call a meeting of the committee in view of the fact that the Dominion ban on shipments to Ontario is merely temporary.

HEAVY DEMAND

"The extra demand in the west is terrific. Factors in this increased demand are the change-over at coast plants from oil to coal burners, and the increased requirements of war factories," he said.

The situation became more acute, he continued, as some mines were not producing 50 per cent. of capacity, and some firms were 10,000 tons behind on dealers' orders for the western market.

Extend Office Term Lt.-Gov. J. C. Bowen

His Honor Lt. Gov. J. C. Bowen will remain in office indefinitely, Hon. James A. MacKinnon, minister of trade and commerce, said here Tuesday.

The five-year term of Lt. Gov. Bowen expired last March, and he has continued in the position since.

Lack of Care Causes Marital Unhappiness

Some Husbands and Wives Think They Can be Both Married and Single—Million Other Things Make Trouble

DEAR MISS DIX: Will you please give me the chief causes of marital unhappiness?

A MAN.

Answer: There are just about as many causes for marital unhappiness as there are imperfections in human nature, and only the Recording Angel keeps an account of them. Anyway, they run into astronomical figures, and if men and women stopped to figure out what their chances were of making a happy marriage, the odds would be so much against them that there would never be another wedding.

Still, "hope springs eternal in the human breast," and boys and girls fall in love and kid themselves into believing that no matter how many other people have failed to be happy though married, they are going to be an exception. Many of them do guess right and marriage continues to be a grand old institution.

But to return to our mutton, as the French say, I think the chief cause of marital unhappiness is that men and women bring less intelligence, less thought, less care, less prudence to their marriages than they do to any other transaction in life. They don't even take the trouble to look over what they are taking home with them, or to find out if they are getting a clear title to the thing in which they are investing their lives.

They wouldn't buy a dog without looking up its pedigree and having a veterinary give it a good bill of health, yet they will marry without even trying to find out what sort of stock their mates came from or whether they have jail records or other husbands or wives or even whether they are sickly.

DON'T BOTHER

Nor do they bother to find out before marriage whether the man or woman they are electing to spend their next thirty or forty years with is a nitwit who will drive them to tears or a charmer who will make the time pass pleasantly. Nor do they ascertain whether they have the same tastes and habits and enjoy the same things or whether they will fight over everything from politics to pies.

The chief cause, then, of marital unhappiness is being a bad picker to start with, and the second is lack of consentiality. Husbands and wives are purely a matter of taste. It doesn't matter what they are if they suit you, they are all right. If they don't suit you, they are all wrong no matter whether they possess every virtue under the sun.

SHORT OF MONEY

The third cause of marital unhappiness is getting married before you can afford the price of a wedding ring. In novels it is very romantic for a young couple to marry without a dollar in their pockets and expect to live blissfully on bread and cheese and kisses. But experience proves that love is a pretty thin diet and that it doesn't take long for even the most enamoured couple to get fed up on kisses and long for beef-steaks. A happy marriage has to be adequately financed just like any other undertaking to make it a success, and ninety-nine times out of a hundred when the bill collector comes knocking on the door Cupid scrams out of the window.

The next cause of marital unhappiness is selfishness. Both the husband and the wife are determined to rule the roost and in the fight over it both love and peace are slain. The husband considers his wife an unpaid servant whose sole mission is to make him comfortable. A wife looks upon her husband as a cash register that she has a right to punch for all that she can get out of it. Neither she can get out of it. Neither makes any effort to make the other happy so the marriage ends in divorce, or just an endurance test that is martyrdom for both.

Another cause for marital unhappiness is that so many husbands and wives think they can be both married and single. When they marry they are not willing to settle down and build a home. They want to keep on running with their crowd, going to parties and having little affairs with other men and women. The thing can't be done. You can't be both bond and free. No woman can make a happy home with a can opener and a cocktail shaker nor can any man combine being a good husband with philandering. When a young couple fails to go domestic after they marry it's all over except the decree absolute.

Of course there are a million other things that wreck the happiness of marriage such as drunkenness, laziness, high temper, lack of common politeness, failure to do team work, but these few suggestions will give you the idea. And you can go on from there yourselves.

MOUSE OR WOMAN?

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am a woman, 36 years old, and have been married for four years. Soon after my marriage my husband beat me up so that I was black and blue for weeks, because I was so tired after my day's work in such a hospital that I did not feel peppy enough to and doing the housework at home drive fifty miles at night to visit some of his relatives. He repeated this performance several times in a few months.

Ever since we have been married my husband has been bossing and bullying me. He supervises every move I make. He tells me what dress to wear, how to put lipstick on etc. and if I don't do exactly as he tells me, he goes into a rage. He is also dishonest in money matters and fickle.

My mother is very old-fashioned and has taught me that it is a wife's duty to give in and take what comes. She still thinks I should stick to my husband and continue my miserable life although my health is failing and my nerves are shot to pieces. My best friend has advised me to leave my husband and try to find a more peaceful life, but I am afraid of what people may say if I do. I have no children. What is your opinion?

MRS. M. W.

Answer: My opinion of a wife who endures a husband who beats her would have to be printed on asbestos paper. What are you—a mouse of a woman? You make me believe in the old story about the wife who bragged about how good and kind and considerate her husband was to her because he never beat her where the bruises would show.

Sometimes a woman has to stand ill-treatment from her husband because he is her only meal ticket. She thinks it is easier to swallow insults than not to have bread to put in her mouth, but you have no such alibi. You are self-supporting; you have a good profession and you already have to work outside the home as well as in it. So if you continue to live with a husband who abuses and insults you, and amuses himself by beating you, it must be because you like it.

It's a queer idea you have of its being a wife's duty to be a punching bag for her husband and a target for his abuse; but if you think that is the way to make your husband happy, go to it. It's your own affair. There is no disputing about tastes.

Low-Calorie Foods Reduce Poundage

Fat Girl Left Alone at Parties

"Ruthie's fat but awfully nice," the hostess said. But the men prefer the slender girls somehow!

If you're a "Ruthie" you needn't accept such a fate. You can lose two pounds a week, choosing foods that cut you down to 1,200 calories a day, instead of the high quantity—maybe 4,000—you get now.

It's easy. When you know your calories you can have just as much to eat. Sliced chicken has only 100 calories a serving (creamed chicken has 455) and a baked white potato (100) is as filling as a sweet potato (200).

Desserts, too, may be on your reducing menu as long as you watch low-calory—such as apple snow, 125 a cup—but NOT chocolate blanc mange, 431!

By being smart about your food you win a smart figure; soon everyone admires yours!

To know your calories, see our 52-page booklet. It has a calory chart, 42 delicious low-calory menus, recipes for slimming desserts. Includes a 3-day liquid diet to start your reducing.

Points for Parents

Teaching a child how to climb safeguards him more effectively than does forbidding him to do what he'll probably do anyway.

Your Baby And Mine

By MILDRED MEYER ELDRED

The temptation of the mother to outside the home to work is an over-powering one these days. There is a triple incentive for both men and women to work in munitions plants and factories turning out war supplies: the novelty of the emergency, the high wages paid and the sense of patriotism provided.

But the woman who is a parent cannot consider herself alone. She must think first and always of her children and what benefits them most. She must recognize that the moment she engages in commercial work outside the home her employer is paying her to think of his interests first and her own interests after that.

Even if there is someone with whom she can leave the children during the work hours, what woman is capable physically of laboring an 8-hour day and then starting in on the housework?

There are some mothers who, due to unalterable circumstances, are compelled to work, and for them there is no alternative. For those persons the government is taking a hand endeavoring to enlarge the facilities of existing nursery schools and providing additional ones to offer full daytime supervision to these motherless children. That service is for the mother who must work, whether or no.

But there are hundreds and hundreds who have no such compulsion except the excited desire to get out of the home and into the world of business. Their husbands are adequately paid. They have not worked previously. But when, in a survey, such mothers were asked if they wanted to work, almost all of them said, "Well, if I can find some woman to look after the children, I think I'd like to."

Such parents are obviously not figuring the full cost of their absence from home. I've had occasion lately to make a visit to some of these homes where the mothers are absent working in war jobs and they are sad indeed. In one the child played out alone while the night-working mother slept all day. In another the magazine-reading caretaker was annoyed to have to be called from her love stories to rescue her 3-year-old charge and his 5-year-old sister from a tree. "You naughty children," she said slapping them viciously.

No mother wants that for her children. She owes it to them to give them a clean, decent home, meals and a loving interest in their activities. Money cannot repay children for the loss of such care.

Our leaflet on, "Conduct for Parents" offers some don'ts for the parent who cares about her treatment of her children. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

McCoy Health Service

Mumps is one of the acute disorders of children which ordinarily is not especially serious, but which may cause mothers considerable worry. If the child with mumps is properly taken care of, an unevenful recovery is the general rule.

Mumps is considered an infectious disease, although the nature of the infective organism has not been proven. However, it is not as contagious as some of the other children's diseases such as measles. That is, if the same number of children are exposed to mumps as to measles, fewer will develop mumps than would develop the other disorder. As a general rule, children under the age of 4 and adults are immune to mumps, although an occasional case does develop in the adult, when it is likely to be more severe than when it occurs in a child.

The first symptom is pain under one ear, usually on the left side, where a slight swelling is noticed. The pain and swelling increase until within 48 hours there is quite an enlargement of the neck and side of the cheek. The parotid gland which is the gland usually involved, is one of the salivary group, and mumps seems to be caused by inflammation or stoppage of this gland. Sometimes the glands are affected on both sides.

The patient complains that swallowing is extremely painful and also chewing. Usually, the swelling is large enough to interfere with the child opening his mouth to take solid food and he is forced to subsist on liquids. As a general rule, the child has a fever and this may range between 101 and 103 degrees.

It is difficult to state exactly the length of the incubation period of this disorder, however, it would appear to be between 17 to 20 days. There is a possibility that the disease may be transmitted from one child to another even for a few days after the swelling is gone and for this reason it is the safest plan to keep the patient away from other children for several days after the gland has returned to normal size.

Usually, the patient having mumps is not seriously ill and although he may complain of a painful sensation on the swollen side, the other symptoms do not cause much difficulty. The fever usually subsides quickly and the disease runs its course and the child recovers within 7 to 9 days. Even in the most severe cases, proper care will eliminate the possibility of serious after-effects.

When the patient is a boy it is especially important to make sure that no epididymitis occurs, as this may bring on a complication which will result in sterility. As with any kind of a fever, a fast should be started at the first and the fast should be continued until all swelling in the gland disappears.

Hot applications should be made to the affected side, keeping such applications on almost continuously day and night. In a few days, the patient will say that cold applications afford the greatest relief, but as a general rule the warmth of the hot applications is gratefully received.

Even though the child may not appear to be especially sick, it is the wisest plan to keep him in bed for at least a week, or until the gland is normal in size. Walking about only invites further trouble and the child is much better off in bed where he will stay warm.

No medicinal remedies are usually needed in mumps. The only treatment needed and which is so simple and so effective, is fasting, hot applications, rest in bed and the use of the daily enema.

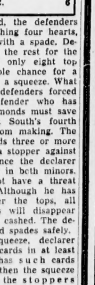
All questions regarding Health and Diet will be answered. Large, stamped, self addressed envelope must be enclosed. Write on one side of paper only. Letters must not exceed 150 words. Address McCoy Health Service, 1351 West 6th St., Los Angeles, Calif.

McKenney On Bridge

By WILLIAM E. McKENNEY
America's Card Authority

Here is the first of five essentials of a squeeze, as they are given by the TAPEL formula. First consider

T standing for threat. A defender is squeezed when he is forced to discard a master card or a guard to a stopper. He can be forced to do this only if the declarer in turn holds some "threat cards."



None vul.

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 N.T.	Pass	3 N.T.	Pass

Opening—♥2. 6

In today's hand, the defenders commence by cashing four hearts, then West exits with a spade. Declarer has to win the rest for the contract. He has only eight top cards, and the sole chance for a ninth trick lies in a squeeze. What stoppers are the defenders forced to hold? The defender who has four or more diamonds must save them, to prevent South's fourth small diamond from making. The defender who holds three or more clubs must keep a stopper against dummy's suit. Hence the declarer holds threat cards in both minors.

But he does not have a threat card in spades. Although he has small cards under the tops, all these small cards will disappear when the tops are cashed. The defenders can discard spades safely.

To effect a squeeze, declarer must have threat cards in at least two suits. If he has such cards only in two suits, then the squeeze will work only if the stoppers against his threats are both in one

A rose ointe lace bertha collar, worn by the bride's mother on her wedding day, trimmed the bride's white satin wedding gown, which was fashioned with a fitted bodice and a full gathered skirt, styled slightly en train. Her veil, which fell from a halo headdress of tulle, was trimmed with orange blossoms, extended beyond the train of her gown. Cream roses and bouvardia formed her cascade bouquet.

Miss Frances Ormond, as maid-of-honor, and Miss Alice Renwick, as bridesmaid, wore orange gowns, styled similarly to the bride's. The former being in pastel blue and the latter in pale mauve. Their turban hats matched the gowns and their gowns and they carried muff purses trimmed with bouquets of mauve and yellow baby chrysanthemums.

Tips to Wives On Home Front From Experts

By ISABEL ALLAN

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—(CP)—Help for the housewives on the home front from the experts:

Mending—Little bits of resourcefulness will make things go a lot farther and last a lot longer, says Byrne Hope Sanders, Mrs. Consumer of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Here are some of her suggestions. If you've got a hole in the lapel of your suit or Betty's sweater, embroider a flower to cover it. Are your boys just at the stage when they have grown out of everything—take your husband's old suit down from the closet and make it over for them.

Mexican Rarebit—Looking for a meat substitute? Paste this in your cook book and use it for dinner tomorrow. It comes straight from the experimental kitchens of the Consumers section of the Department of Agriculture. Take three tablespoons of butter, one small onion, three tablespoons flour, two cups grated cheese, two cups canned tomatoes, one teaspoon Worcester sauce, salt and pepper. Cook chopped onion slowly in butter for five minutes, stir in flour, gradually add tomatoes and cook until the mixture thickens. Add grated cheese and seasonings and cook gently until the cheese melts. Serve at once on toast.

Wheat—Marion Harlow, Assistant Director of Nutrition Services suggests taking advantage of Canada's bumper wheat crops by using more whole wheat products. She says it will help to overcome vitamin B deficiency that affects eight out of 10 Canadians. For a delicious and nourishing breakfast cereal she suggests, a combination of half rolled oats and half rolled wheat.

Lard—The next time you go to use butter in your cooking or baking pause; then ask yourself if lard wouldn't do. Instead, Mrs. Phyllis Turner, oils and fats administrator of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, asks you to use it wherever possible instead of butter. She says there is a surplus of lard now as a here part of it is produced from the fat of hogs, and the number of hogs being raised is increasing every day.

Pork—Don't-buy-this and don't-buy-that slogans are increasing every day but the don't-buy-pork theme is considered by food authorities as one of the most important. However, Laura Pepper, chief of the consumer section, Department of Agriculture, while asking you to cut out bacon, ham and fresh pork, says tenderloins, feet and knuckles are not exported and you can buy them with a clear conscience. She adds that sausages and head cheese are still available.

Cough Drops—Sore throats are cropping up again and for those who resort to cough drops here is good advice. The customs and excise division of the department of national revenue says cough drops aren't candy and therefore don't come under the 30 per cent excise tax on candy.

IN OTTAWA

Section Officer Sylvia Evans of this city, staff officer at No. 4 Training Command, Calgary, who is in Ottawa attending a press conference for staff officers of the R.C.A.F. (W.D.). This is the first meeting of officers since the division went on active service.

1st Conference Of Airwomen Held at Ottawa

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—(CP)—The young woman joining the Women's Division of the Royal Canadian Air Force is just as keen to be an operations-room clerk as the average man is keen to be a pilot, officers of the divisions agreed Monday at a press conference.

These staff officers are in Ottawa for their first meeting since the division went on active service. Under their command, from coast to coast, are about 7,000 women.

Their force will be one year old Oct. 21, and they were agreed that R.C.A.F. women have shown they can do many essential jobs just as well as men. But they didn't say they could do these tasks better than men.

Ten members of the division now are in the United Kingdom receiving instructions as operations room clerks, said Sqdn. Officer Ashleen Walker, of Ottawa, senior officer of the division. When they return they will be available as instructors.

Operations room clerks keep in touch with aircraft in flight and mark their positions for operational officers. Such women will be used extensively in Canada after training is available for more members of the women's division.

WORK APPEALS

All officers said this type of work appears to appeal to women now in the service because it gives women an actual part in operational activities.

"We have in the division at least eight women with their private pilots' licences, and there are many others who would like to have instruction in flying so they could undertake the ferrying of machines, as is being done by women pilots in the United Kingdom," said Sqdn. Officer Walker.

She consulted with other officers and most of them reported wouldbe pilots had read application for enlistment.

The round-table consultation also brought out that the division has:

A qualified woman welder now employed in aircraft work;

An experienced parachute jumper, Assistant Section Officer E. G. Flint of Flin Flon, Man., now in Ottawa;

Several meteorologists who have been taking special courses;

A number attending wireless courses at Montreal, after graduation, will take over ground duties now handled by men.

Officers said that those taking the wireless courses have done "extraordinarily well." Some had completed examinations with 100 per cent marks and the majority ran about 90 per cent.

As for teletype operators, a group of women "completed in three weeks a course that usually takes six weeks."

WOMEN IN THE KITCHEN

The officers said, one of the most important contributions of the division's division was in the kitchens. Airmen had indicated satisfaction with having women take part in the preparation and serving of meals. In the offices and sergeant's messes, women are actually serving the food.

The officers entered the R.C.A.F. division with the rank of airwomen last year and went through the ordinary basic courses.

Flight Officer Jean Cumming of Montreal, Staff Officer at No. 1 Training Command, Toronto, was with a travel agency and had worked on a Vancouver newspaper.

Flight Officer E. J. C. Henderson of Toronto, Staff Officer at No. 2 Training Command, Winnipeg, was secretary to the head of a Toronto publishing house.

Section Officer Sylvia Evans of Edmonton, Staff Officer at No. 4 Training Command, Calgary, was with a "Welcome Wagon" service at Edmonton.

Willkie Has Long Session With Chiang

CHUNGKING, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Wendell Willkie spent six hours in conference with Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek last night and went to bed after 1 a.m., but was up early today for another crowded schedule.

His talk with Chiang was the fourth in an unprecedented series and was the longest ever granted to a foreign personage by the Chinese leader.

The Chinese press continued to feature Willkie's visit with long accounts of his activities and editorial comment. Ta Kung Pao reported that a plan was underway to rename one of Chungking's main streets "Willkie Street."

"Willkie brought sunshine to foggy Chungking," the paper said.

Ta Kung Pao, in a strongly-worded editorial, expressed the hope that Willkie would inform President Roosevelt and the American people of China's plea for the arrogation of extra-territoriality and foreign concessions.

"Willkie is a straightforward, sincere man who has won the friendship of everyone," the editorial said.

"It is very difficult to understand why the Allies still give us unequal treatment."

49,752 Civilian U.K. War Deaths

LONDON, Oct. 6.—(CP)—Civilian deaths from war causes totalled 49,752 in England and Wales during the year ended March 31, the health ministry reported today. The victims died as a result of bombings, resultant fires, building collapses and the like.

Apart from these deaths, the report showed the death rate was 11.7 per 1,000, a point below the 1940 figure and only two-tenths of a point above 1939.

The British nation, though managing with fewer doctors and dentists, is maintaining its "stubborn good health," Ernest Brown, minister of health, said in the introduction to the ministry report.

British Destroy Nazi Torpedo Boat Off Belgian Coast

LONDON, Oct. 6.—(CP)—British light naval forces destroyed a German motor torpedo boat in a clash with an enemy flotilla off the Belgian coast last night, but one British vessel is missing, the Admiralty announced tonight.

Other British vessels were damaged. The German ship, one of a formation of torpedo boats and motor torpedo boats, "was set on fire and subsequently was seen to blow up," said a communique.

8 Persons Killed As Plane Crashes In English Village

LONDON, Oct. 6.—(CP)—A British plane which crashed into the centre of the village of Somersham last night after its crew had bailed out safely, killed at least eight of the townspeople, it was disclosed today.

Two others are missing. Six dwellings of the Huntingdon county community north of London were destroyed, and others damaged.

John De Frain, Ellscott, pleaded guilty in supreme court Tuesday to a charge of dangerous driving, and was remanded until Friday for sentence by Mr. Justice G. B. O'Connor.

The charge against De Frain arose out of an accident on Rowland Road on April 23 last in which Gary Usher, three years, received fatal injuries.

R. Fred Jackson, counsel for the accused, said he would address the court Friday seeking leniency for De Frain.

Air Accidents Take Four Lives

CALGARY, Oct. 5.—(CP)—Four men were killed in three separate air accidents in the Calgary district during Monday evening and night. A British cadet at No. 37 S.F.T.S. (R.C.A.F.) airfield was killed by a whirling propellor, a pupil pilot from No. 31 E.F.T.S. at Dewinton was killed on a solo; an airman was instantly killed in the crash of a plane from No. 3 S.F.T.S. (R.C.A.F.), Currie Barracks, and a New Zealand airman died shortly after 10 a.m. today as a result of this crash.

The plane's instructor pilot got out of the badly smashed plane and walked about a mile after the accident.

Canadian Fliers Get 52 Awards

LONDON, Oct. 6.—(CP)—A record number of 52 decorations were awarded Canadians in the R.C.A.F. and R.A.F. in September, R.C.A.F. overseas headquarters announced today.

The decorations, among them awards for gallantry in the Dieppe operation and for exceptional service shown by bomber crews, included 37 Distinguished Flying Crosses, 12 Distinguished Flying Medals, and three Bars to the D.F.C.

The awards raised to 202 the total given Canadian airmen since the start of the war.

Four have won the coveted Distinguished Order, one of whom was Wing Cmdr. John Fulton of Kamloops, B.C., who already held the D.F.C. and the Air Force Cross. Now the most decorated Canadian flier in the present war, he was reported missing a few days before the award of the D.S.O. was announced.

New Nickel Out

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—(CP)—Canada's new "blackout nickel," a 12-sided coin of copper and zinc, was put into circulation in most larger Canadian centres yesterday, Bank of Canada officials said.

Sullen Group Nazi Prisoners Reach Canada

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Oct. 6.—(CP)—Sullen German tank men from Rommel's African corps, nearly 1,000 strong, now are safely tucked away in Canadian internment camps for the duration after landing at this port.

Arrival in Canada instead of the promised Cairo, where Rommel had said they were headed, had done nothing to improve their tempers, and they did not seem pleased to exchange the heat and dust of the desert for this climate.

But they gave no trouble, officers in charge of the prisoners said, either at the landing here or on the long boat trip from the Mediterranean to this dominion. Tough Polish soldiers, fanatical enemies of the Nazis, made sure of that as they guarded the Germans on the long ocean jaunt.

ONE ANTI-NAZI

Canadian troops with fixed bayonets and fingers pressed on tommy gun triggers took over at the dockside here, herding the browned, oft-timed bearded Germans to waiting trains. No incidents marred the landing.

However, one German took this opportunity to display his long-hidden hate for Nazism. On the boat trip he was guarded separately, not to keep him from escaping but to keep fellow prisoners from attacking him.

He was glad to be a prisoner as that meant he was free from the rule of Hitler. He insisted there were many others who thought as he did and were only waiting a similar opportunity to break free.

Edmonton Firm Loses Appeal

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—(CP)—The supreme court of Canada today dismissed an appeal by W. W. Sales Ltd. of Edmonton, against a judgment of the Alberta courts in favor of the City of Edmonton, Armstrong-Cosans Ltd., B. Sheldons Ltd., and Robert Arkinstall.

The case arose out of damages caused by a fire in the Powell block which followed the burning in an oil drum of debris from premises of the Sales Company. The courts held the Sales Company responsible for the damages.

Danes Enter Nazi New Order Bloc

LONDON, Oct. 6.—(CP)—A demand by Hitler that Denmark agree to her "voluntary incorporation" into a bloc of model states as a showpiece of the Nazi New Order has been rejected by the Danish authorities, the Free Danish Council here reported today.

The demand was said to have been accompanied by a threat the Gestapo would run Denmark if it were refused.

Bevin Denounces Shipyard Strike

LONDON, Oct. 6.—(CP)—Labor Minister Ernest Bevin, speaking in the House of Commons today, denounced as "unwarrantable and unjustifiable" a strike of Tyneside shipyard workers who quit yesterday because of a change in payday from Tuesday to Sunday midnight.

The number of men on strike was not disclosed but several yards reported more men at work today than yesterday.

At the same time about 400 employees of one southern railroad depot ended a strike which began yesterday with a walkout protest against the dismissal of one worker.

City Airman Listed Missing Overseas

Flt.-Lt. James Whitham, D.F.C., of this city, is listed as missing, in the 288th R.C.A.F. casualty list issued at Ottawa Tuesday. One of the most brilliant R.C.A.F. officers, he won the Distinguished Flying Cross for his share in the air operations connected with the Dieppe attack on Aug. 19.

Hospitals' Role In Wartime is Discussed Here

The role of hospitals in wartime was the problem taken up Tuesday at the meeting of the Alberta Hospitals Association.

Dr. Park of Calgary discussed the possible requirements of aid from civilian hospitals, while Dr. Hill, Calgary, spoke about civilian casualties and the organization necessary to take care of them.

Suggestions for hospital protection during air raids were offered to the group by Dr. M. McEachern, associate director of the American College of Surgeons, Chicago.

Black-outs and general A.R.P. organization were the topics assigned to J. Barnes, Calgary, and Dr. G. M. Little, medical officer of health for Edmonton.

Dr. A. E. Archer, Lamont, president-elect of the Canadian Medical Association, spoke about the rural hospital and possible methods of co-operation in A.R.P. work and in the care of casualties.

The morning session concluded with a round table on hospital problems likely to arise as a result of possible air raids and wide-spread scattering of incendiary bombs. Dr. Harvey Agnew, Toronto, and Dr. George Stephens, Montreal, conducted the round table.

The convention was brought to a close Tuesday afternoon after a routine business meeting.

134 Home Owners Offer Their Rooms

The office of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce received 134 applications Monday from home owners in the city offering available accomodation. Monday was the first day that the office served in a liaison capacity between people who have accomodation available and those requiring living quarters.

All but eight of the applicants offered single rooms, four offered single rooms with supplementary kitchen facilities, two offered housekeeping rooms, one had available a small suite and one home owner had a 14-room house available. Applications from both sources continue at a heavy pace, R. T. Rose, executive secretary of the Chamber stated.

Appeal Dismissed On Oil Royalties

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—(CP)—The Alberta government failed to establish its right to collect oil royalties on some sections of land owned by the Majestic Mines Ltd. of Edmonton under a judgment delivered by the Supreme Court of Canada today.

The court dismissed the Alberta appeal from judgments of the provincial courts which also went against the province. The company held the lands under a patent issued in 1908 which did not prescribe any royalty for oil.

The action was instituted as a test case to determine the province's right to royalties on land granted by the Dominion Government prior to the transfer of the natural resources to the provincial government in 1929.

Holstein Sale is Held at Calgary

With more than 100 purebred, registered and inspected animals offered for sale, first annual sale of purebred Holstein-Fresian milch cows and heifers was held at Calgary Tuesday under the direction of the Alberta Provincial Holstein Association. A. A. Campbell, acting provincial livestock commissioner, and D. H. McCallum, dairy commissioner, attended the sale.

City Commissioner John Hodgson returned to Edmonton Tuesday from a meeting of municipal officers of United States and Canada, held Monday at Calgary. He said that the main question before the meeting was discussion on uniform municipal accounting throughout the Dominion and the United States.

The contestants were John P. Gorman, Antigonish, Liberal, and Russell Cunningham, Glace Bay, C.C.F. Cunningham, a railway worker, was chosen by the C.C.F. organization after a nominating convention here Saturday had failed to choose a candidate.

Motorized Unit Needs Recruits Of Many Types

Any man of military age wishing to learn to drive all types of army vehicles can get that opportunity through enlisting in the 16th Brigade Group, R.C.A.S.C. (No. 26 Company), Active Army.

Recruiting for this unit started on Monday at the Prince of Wales Armory, the recruiting being conducted by a detachment from Red Deer Camp under the command of Capt. E. G. Hession.

Two hundred and fifty men are needed for this unit, and men will be enlisted who can pass the B2 medical category. A number of tradesmen are required. The trades needed include automotive fitters, electricians, carpenters, blacksmiths, turners, coppersmiths, motor mechanics, driver mechanics, cooks, butchers, typist-clerks and a baker.

The recruiting office is located at room 51, Prince of Wales Armory, and recruits are asked to contact Capt. T. W. Cogland, M.C., or the officer commanding the recruiting unit at this address.

The unit will be located at the Red Deer training centre, and it is understood it will form part of the 8th Canadian Division.

Men seeking to enlist can also contact the orderly room at the Red Deer camp where their applications will be dealt with.

Dividends Tax Ruling Upheld

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—(CP)—Dividends from a foreign company are liable to provincial income tax, the Supreme Court of Canada decided today in dismissing an appeal by Mrs. C. Kerr of Calgary against a judgment in favor of the superintendent of income tax and the attorney-general for Alberta.

The case started with an application by Mrs. Kerr for a declaration she was not liable for provincial income tax on dividends from a foreign company, some of which were deposited in an Alberta bank and some of which were deposited to her credit in British Columbia.

The trial judge held she was liable to tax on the dividends deposited in Alberta but not on those deposited in British Columbia. The Appellate division of the Supreme Court of Alberta held the tax was a personal tax and since Mrs. Kerr was in Alberta all the dividends were taxable. The Supreme Court of Canada took the same view.

Nov. 10 Deadline To Mail Soldier Parcels Overseas

TORONTO, Oct. 6—(CP)—November 10 has been set by the postal department as the last mailing day for Christmas parcels to soldiers overseas with any hope of delivery by Christmas, officials of the post office here said today.

The tremendous amount of mail now reaching the base post office, where mail and parcels are sorted for all parts of the world will be greatly increased by the Christmas avalanche, it was stated.

Senders of parcels are advised that by sending less than the limit of 11 pounds per parcel much can be done in providing shipping space.

Most agates occur in eruptive rocks or ancient lavas.

Potatoes Must Be Graded Now By Federal Act

All potatoes offered for sale in Alberta must be graded to meet the standards of quality specified in the Dominion Fruit and Vegetable Act, according to officials of the extension branch of the provincial department of agriculture.

Through enforcement of grading regulations it is planned to place a standardized high quality product on the market, an official of the department stated. "Buyers from outside the province will know exactly what they are buying, as they will order by grade and be protected under the act," he said.

HIGH QUALITY

"The local consumer will be assured of a high quality product which will be attractive when cooked and will be free from unnecessary waste. The result will be increased consumption locally, an expanded export market and a better price to the producer.

"The Alberta department of agriculture and the Alberta Vegetable Growers' Association believe the grading of potatoes being offered for sale will be beneficial to producers and consumers alike."

LONDON, Oct. 6.—(CP)—The Rome radio broadcast a special communique today reporting that an Italian submarine put four torpedoes into the bow of a United States battleship of the 33,000-ton Mississippi class in the Atlantic 330 miles off Freetown, West Africa, and that the battleship "was seen sinking."

There was no confirmation from any other source for this claim nor any indication that United States warships were operating in that area. (In Washington, the Navy Department said it had no comment to make on the claim.)

The communique said the Italian submarine Barbarigo scored four torpedo hits on the battleship at 2:34 a.m., Rome time, today (6:34 p.m. M.D.T., Monday).

The Barbarigo previously had been reported by the Italians to have sunk a United States battleship of the Maryland class near Brazil last May 22. This claim, more than four months later, still has no confirmation.

The Mississippi is the oldest of three battleships grouped by the United States as the New Mexico class.

Rapid Italian Collapse Seen Air Pounding

to the rest of the world than they ever were before, and maintain that position then we are all fools," Mr. Raymond declared.

WELL-INFORMED

The New York newspaperman is probably one of the best informed reporters on international affairs in the world today. After leaving Rome he travelled through North Africa and the Middle East to Java and was there in the last days of the struggle against the Japs. He was at the front in New Guinea with Australian and American troops and at Port Darwin when that port was blasted by Japanese planes.

He served with an American Army Tank corps in France in the First Great War and has two sons serving with the American Army Air Force at the present time. One is pilot and the other a radio operator.

"Every time a bomb drops in Italy you can feel a tremor run through the entire country," Mr. Raymond said. He was in Italy when the British made their first raids on Naples and other Italian cities.

"The Italian people hate the war and hate the Germans, but are convinced the Axis will win because they are so greatly impressed by the Nazi military machine.

FEAR AMERICA

But they do fear America and the immense productivity of this continent, he continued.

"Several times I was asked: 'You don't really think America will come into the war, do you?', and when I replied that we likely would, the people would look frightened and sad. They did not want to fight America. There was also very little anti-British feeling, except for planned outbursts for propaganda purposes," Mr. Raymond said.

"I think the war could be greatly shortened if we were to concentrate mass bombing raids on Italy. We could do it now with long-range Flying Fortresses, based in Egypt, or if we want to get tough with Vichy, from bases in French North Africa.

"If Italian cities were heavily bombed there would be such panic that the Germans would have to move in thousands of troops to keep Italy in the war.

"Italy is not an inconsiderable part of the Axis war machine and the dispersion of German troops to that country would play an important part in the defeat of the Axis, even if Italy were not immediately invaded," he explained.

YULETIME INCIDENT

Mr. Raymond told of an incident in Italy on Christmas eve of 1940.

"I spent the evening with an Italian family when there was an air raid alarm. There were no bombs dropped, just an alarm. The family became panic-stricken. The woman cried:

"'Why should we go through this for two lunatics?'"

"I asked her who she meant and she replied: "'Hitler and Mussolini.'"

The Germans have already made a complete occupation of Italy in one sense.

It has been a gradual process. It started before the war with the appointment of liaison officers by the Nazis to various Italian ministries.

"Now the Germans run all the Italian government departments after just coming in to 'help out,'" Mr. Raymond explained.

This is rankling the higher ups in the old Italian Fascist party but there's nothing they can do about it. Mussolini steered them into that trap so they have to sink or swim with the Germans.

VERY COURTEOUS

The Italians in general were very courteous to the American correspondent in Rome, although secret service men shadowed them everywhere.

A favorite stunt of Axis correspondents was fishing for secrets. The Japs in Rome were very active at this. They would throw a party with plenty of champagne for U.S. correspondents and then try to get information about things in America.

"We drank their champagne and then delighted in giving the wrong answers to their questions," Raymond said. Germans, too, were polite to the American correspondents but, "They knew we didn't like them, so they remained aloof from us in Rome," he said.

"War with the United States is a particularly tough blow for many Italians. When the U.S. froze assets of the Axis countries it meant that millions and millions of dollars from husbands, sons and daughters living and working in the States, stopped flowing back to Italy. That in itself made the war with America highly unpopular. Then again, Italians remembered even American Red Cross funds that kept their country from starving during and immediately after the last war," Mr. Raymond said.

DISAPPROVE OF STORIES

Communications were closed to Raymond for 10 days on one occasion and twice for three days, because he sent stories to his paper that the Italian government did not approve of.

John Whittaker, well known correspondent, who was a close friend of Raymond in Rome, was barred altogether.

After leaving Rome in October of 1941, because "Rome was like a sleepy country town and censorship was very, very tough," Raymond went to Gibraltar, Tangiers and West Africa. He was in Morocco when Pearl Harbor was bombed. He later went to Egypt and then by British troop convoy to the far east. He was bound for Singapore but the great city had fallen before his arrival. He therefore went to Java, instead, where he witnessed the closing battles for the Dutch East Indies and fled to Australia in the last convoy of ships. Five of the ships in the convoy were torpedoed.

Arriving in Australia, Raymond was just in time to be in several bombing raids on Port Darwin.

The Japs made quite a mess of the harbor and docks and sank several ships in the harbor, because the Allies were woefully weak in air power at that time, the correspondent said.

Raymond scored a scoop on the arrival of General Douglas MacArthur in Australia, having luck in meeting with some of his staff who told him the General was coming from Bataan.

"Allied air power is growing in the Pacific and I think we will give the Japanese all they want from now on," Mr. Raymond said, although he doubted if sufficient equipment is reaching General MacArthur to permit of a full fledged offensive in the South Pacific.

GANGSTER REGIME

"The Fascist regime in Italy is a gangster regime. It is just as if Al Capone and his gang were to take over the whole administration of the United States. There are about seven million party members. You have to be a party member before you can enter a profession.

"About one million people at the inner circle of the party really run the country and it is just a racket."

Raymond was present at one interview with Mussolini given to the world press. It was at a time when there were reports circulating that Il Duce was sick.

After the interview the correspondents were invited to Mussolini's villa, outside of Rome, where they watched the "great man" ride horseback for 15 minutes and then later saw him play tennis in a demonstration of great vigor.

Raymond was born in New Bedford, Mass. For several years he worked on the New York Sun, then went to France with the U.S. army in 1917.

He remained in France after the war as a tutor to a wealthy French family's children. Returning to the States he worked on several midwestern papers, finishing up with the Detroit Journal. Returning to Paris in 1921 he worked for the North American Newspaper Alliance and the London Daily Sketch.

JOINED TIMES' STAFF

In December, 1924, he joined the staff of the New York Times and was the London correspondent of that paper in 1927 and 1928.

He returned to the U.S. in 1929 and went to work for the New York Herald-Tribune, with which paper he has been with ever since.

He hopes to go to Europe to report the war scenes there in the near future.

Mayor Obtains First Tin Lizzie Derby Ticket

Standardized Health Plans Forecast Here

strain placed upon the remainder, who must care for all civilian needs, is obtained.

Dr. Archer said it is reported that some districts in New Brunswick now have only one doctor for 4,500 people.

Hospitals have suffered a great loss in trained nurses to the armed forces and of other essential personnel, further aggravating the situation, it was pointed out.

As a result of the seriousness of the situation being brought to the attention of the federal government a board was set up under the department of national defence to work out a plan whereby the best possible medical service, under the circumstances, might be made available to all Canadians.

AIMED AT VICTORY

"We feel sure the decision of that board will be one that is aimed at assuring the most important thing at the moment and that is the winning of the war, but medical and hospital services for civilians is a highly important and essential service," Dr. Archer declared.

"One of the bright spots in the terrible struggle in which we are now engaged is the vast amount of new knowledge being made available by medical research as a result of the war," said Dr. Archer.

The trend toward prepayment of hospitalization has become marked of recent years, the doctor said. He personally has looked over as many as 300 different forms of health insurance. All of this has come as a result of expanding knowledge in the last 75 years that demands more complicated specialization in the prevention, diagnosis and treatment of disease.

"I feel the time is near for a single scheme for all Canadians in prevention and treatment of disease. And we must give the matter intensive study. If we are to be true to our pledge to assist suffering humanity we must make certain that the scheme is sound and progressive. It must be no second-best scheme. It would be a backward step if we allowed any scheme to be crystallized into legislation that is not in the best interests of all Canadians," Dr. Archer stated.

COSTS INCREASED

Tracing the history and medicine and hospitalization in Canada, the speaker said that at the time of confederation, 75 years ago, the average cost of hospitalization per patient day was 70 cents. Now it is close to $3.50 per patient day.

Specialization, springing from the great advance in scientific knowledge of all kinds, has resulted in the increased costs.

At the time of confederation, the family physician, as a rule, possessed all the knowledge of his profession and was qualified to carry out all of the accepted forms of treatment known at that time. His equipment usually consisted of a stethescope and a table spoon. Sometimes he possessed a thermometer, but not often. There was no diagnostic equipment, no laboratories and no X-Ray.

"In other words, the volume of medical knowledge was so restricted at that time that one man could offer all that medical science had to offer. Hospital operating rooms had floors covered with sawdust. There is only one place that I know of that still has sawdust on the floors," Dr. Archer observed, amid laughter.

"You get a good idea of what the situation was at that time when you know that there were not as many hospital beds in all Canada then as there is now in the Royal Alexandra Hospital."

There was no preventitive medicine. Vaceine for smallpox was just starting to win acceptance, the bacteria theory of disease was unknown, mortality from broken bones and fractures was "terrible" and infant mortality ran as high as 25 per cent.

"People went into hospitals then in fear of their lives and as a last resort, now they enter with confidence and hope," the doctor said.

The hospitals and the medical profession must work hand in hand as one is dependent on the other, the doctor said.

Dr. Agnew said he wondered if many people fully realized the drama of the modern hospital. He said he doubted if a prisoner in a courtroom was more interested in the verdict, than the relatives who crowd around a doctor in a hospital waiting room after an operation.

The speaker told an amusing story about the discovery of chloroform as an anesthetic.

Dr. Simpson of Edinburgh hit on the importance of chloroform, following a "chloroform party" in which a number of high spirited guests "sniffed" the fluid just for the kick they got out of it.

The drama of the hospital has been overshadowed by the titanic struggle in which we are now engaged, which is proper Dr. Agnew stated, but he felt there might be a danger of losing sight of the essential nature of the civilian hospital in time of war.

ELIMINATE "FRILLS"

"Hospitals are much the same as the police, and fire departments and the city water system," Dr. Agnew said. It was fortunate that the federal government has recognized that hospitals are most essential. He predicted that hospital costs will rise and many of the frills will have to be dropped because of the war, but he hoped plans would be made so that the essential services of hospitals would be carried on in all parts of Canada.

Dr. Agnew paid tribute to the large number of women who have volunteered for V.A.D. work in hospital wards to relieve the nursing shortage, and finished his address with a plea for more young women to enter training as nurses.

Dr. Stephens said that Canada's 900 hospitals are now handling a million patients a year.

"Hospitals are big business," he said. Industrial accidents are on the increase as a result of the war industry boom and in addition there are the many soldier patients.

Hospitals are subject to many restrictions, but Ottawa has been quite sympathetic and has modified many orders since they were imposed.

Hospitals are not only essential as institutes of healing but as economic units in the system, the doctor asserted. If medical and hospital services are not maintained morale of the fighting services and those engaged in making of munitions would suffer, the speaker contended.

URGE CO-OPERATION

He read an editorial from a hospital association magazine which asked for co-operation from the public in this time of stress. Patients should not expect luxuries of normal times, with flowers on the tables and waste paper baskets emptied each day.

The meeting concluded with the showing of an educational film, entitled: "The White Battalion—Serving all mankind."

Riverdale League Elects Officers

John Moon, president of the Riverdale Community League, was re-elected for a second term Monday night, when members of the league assembled in the community hall to elect officers for all branches of the league. T. H. Fawcus, vice-president, presided in the absence of the president.

The full slate of officers is as follows: John Moon, president; T. H. Fawcus, vice-president; W. Dredge, secretary; B. Hager, treasurer.

Committee chairmen: Education, L. L. Pound; recreation, J. P. Morris; membership, A. Simpson; civics, B. Hager and T. H. Fawcus.

Mrs. W. Dredge was elected president of the Women's Sewing Circle, which will take charge of the league's social functions during the year.

Delegates to the Federation of Community Leagues are L. L. Pound and Mrs. J. Moon. The grounds committee is composed of J. Moon, A. Simpson, W. Dredge and T. H. Fawcus.

Getting Around

a demonstration. For two days police or soldiers stand guard in front of the American embassy, and the controlled newspapers start the build-up, something like advance publicity for a ball game or hockey game.

Then the students come and boo and yell outside the building and perhaps throw in a few good, hearty hisses to boot.

Raymond laughingly told of sitting on a hotel balcony opposite the American embassy and enjoying the "demonstration" with other American correspondents, who knew just what was coming off in advance.

Occasionally police will ride among the "demonstrators" swinging their clubs, but nobody is really smacked down. Before Italy was at war with Britain and France the same kind of "demonstrations" were staged by students in front of British and French embassies.

Raymond is convinced that Mussolini has failed utterly in his attempt to convert the peace-loving Italians into a nation of fighting lions. Why has the Italian airman made such a poor showing in the war so far, after Italians won Schneider cup races in pre-war days? Simply because the Fascists have pocketed millions in taxation that was supposed to build a first class Italian air force, Mr. Raymond states.

"The Italian is a splendid mechanic and a good pilot but he has no stomach for this fight, especially after the way the leaders of the country have grafted, Mr. Raymond said.

Seven Service Clubs to Hold Joint Luncheon

John C. Deifenbaker, K.C., M.P., of Prince Albert, Sask., will be the guest speaker at a joint luncheon meeting of Edmonton's seven service clubs at the Macdonald hotel at 12:15 p.m. Wednesday.

Mr. Deifenbaker will address the clubmen on points pertaining to the Victory Loan campaign that is scheduled to commence Oct. 19.

H. M. E. Evans, provincial vice-chairman of the national war finance committee, and chairman of the Northern Alberta division, will preside.

SERVICEMEN TO ATTEND

Among those seated at the head table will be the presidents of the seven service clubs, each with a member of the armed services at his side.

The regular weekly meeting of the council of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce has been cancelled to enable the officials to attend.

Clubs participating are the Kinsmen, Rotary, Gyro, Cosmopolitan, Lions, Optimists and Kiwanis.

Mediterranean countries have used sponges for washing since the earliest times.

Restrictions Medical Needs Are Discussed

Probable market restrictions of hospital supplies was one of the subjects discussed at the Monday afternoon session of the Alberta Hospitals Association convention, which is meeting in the Macdonald hotel.

Mr. Manes of Calgary presented a paper and the discussion was led by Fred Heathcote of the Royal Alexandra hospital.

Technical papers were read by Sister Beatrice, Miss Helen Peters, Dr. J. J. Ower, M. V. Pearson, Dr. A. C. McGougan, and Dr. George Stephens of Montreal. J. Barns and Mr. Ross were in charge of the war time hospital budgets discussion.

The afternoon meeting concluded with an open round-table discussion which was led by Dr. Stephens and Dr. Harvey Agnew, Toronto.

The main feature of the Monday morning session was an address by Dr. Stephens concerning health insurance.

Dr. A. H. Baker, Calgary, director of the tuberculosis division of the provincial health department, and president of the association, is acting as chairman. The secretary-treasurer of the association is F. Swain.

Suppose Everybody said

"Let George do it"

How easy it is when confronted with a personal responsibility to dodge the issue with "Oh, let George do it"; to ease one's conscience with the thought that someone will do it—it will get done somehow.

Right now there is an opportunity and obligation for everyone to do his part in our supreme war effort. Many are in the armed forces, risking their all—their lives—that Canada may survive as a free land. Those at home have their responsibility—to supply everything our fighting forces need to give themselves an even break with the enemy.

Every dollar invested in Victory Bonds does its bit in the life and death struggle for Victory—and without victory nothing matters. We, on the home front, can serve by saving—by putting every possible dollar into Victory Bonds. Any self-denial we make is more than a duty—it is a privilege. People in axis and occupied countries have no choice in the matter—whereas we loan the money at a fair rate of interest and on the soundest security in the world.

WORK—SAVE and LEND to the limit of your ability. Don't wait for George to do it—he may be waiting for you. Get ready to buy the new Victory Bonds!

CHAPTER XV

IT was working out, Candace thought happily, in a way that was almost too good to be true. The big intrafraternity dance, Martin's birthday and, best of all, her transfer all coming at once like this!

She had several days off before she was to start at Good Samaritan. They gave her a chance to make arrangements with Mrs. Prosser for the birthday supper after the dance, and to do some personal shopping.

She squandered long-saved money on a dress she felt befitting to such a great occasion. She was exquisite in a pansy-purple thing that clung in all the right places and billowed frothily for the rest. It did marvelous things for her skin and her fine eyes and she knew it.

Candace was pleased when, at dinner, the solicitous waiter left them alone. She sat back, smiling at Martin. "What was it Peter said he had to do?"

They had planned to have dinner together, the three of them, and some girl Peter had asked; but at the last minute Peter had sent word that he couldn't make it.

"Some cases they've been following went bad," Martin said. "They're doing a transfusion."

"Tonight, of all nights," she said, sighing a little. "But, then," she added, "he doesn't get stuck nearly as often as you do, at that."

Martin stirred guiltily, resentfully. "That's all part of a doctor's life."

"Oh, I know," Candace said quickly, "I know! I didn't mean to sound complaining." Martin was so darned touchy these days!

She leaned forward a little. "Martin," she said softly, "I have a wonderful surprise for you. A wonderful present. We won't have to be separated any more. I've gotten a transfer to Good Samaritan."

He didn't say anything, but he didn't look moved, he looked startled. First startled, and then guarded. She saw, with a sick shock, that he was displeased.

All her happiness, all her assurance was abruptly stripped from her. Dazed with disappointment, she heard herself apologizing. "I won't hang on to you, truly I won't. If you think it might be embarrassing, it needn't be generally known that we're engaged. I though that with both of us in the same hospital, even though we'll each be busy and won't have much time off, it will still be something just to catch a glimpse of each other occasionally—"

Then, when Martin still didn't say anything, "You're not happy about it? You're not pleased."

Martin said carefully, "I'm surprised naturally." Nothing more.

But later, when they were in a taxi bound for the dance, he said abruptly, "Candace, there's something you should know."

With a frightened sense of impending doom she cried out sharply, "No!" Then she tried to lighten that. "You sound so serious, let's not be serious tonight—"

The evening was a failure. No amount of pretending could save it. Peter didn't show up at all, but she never noticed. Her mind was a blank, she was sick with this sense of foreboding.

She was relieved when Martin finally said savagely, "Let's get out of here."

They went back to Mrs. Prosser's. At the sight of the table and the cake with its candles waiting to be lighted, Candace shivered.

Martin said, trying to be hearty, "Looks might swell, chick. Your idea, I take it?" But his heartiness had a hollow ring and her own smile with which she tried to answer him felt wooden.

Martin had felt her shiver. "This is the damnedest damp moldy place," he said. A fir had been laid and he applied a match to the shavings and drew a rickety chair close to fireplace for her.

When Martin no longer had any excuse for fussing about, he said finally, "Candace."

It's coming now, she thought. Her shivering stopped, she sat frozen in an icy calm.

"You remember Pete and I told you about that tea for the prospective interns? You remember we mentioned that girl, Faith Hartshorne, the daughter of the chairman of the board? I looked at a dog of hers that was sick, you remember that? Well, the girl was grateful or something and she must have mentioned it to her father and he was too and they phoned me one night and asked me to dinner."

Candace made a move as if to speak but he said, "No, wait. Wait until I've told you—I felt I couldn't refuse because after all I wanted that appointment. Oh, I know it sounds silly. But Good Samaritan isn't like most hospitals; pull counts a lot with the appointments. You wouldn't know about that." (Oh, wouldn't I, she thought bitterly, she'd pulled some strings of her own to be near Martin—in—) "Anyway, Hartshorne is number one boy there, and I felt I couldn't afford to have him down on me. So I went."

He added abruptly, "I've been seeing the girl occasionally since."

The hospital tea had been months before. All this time, then—Candace said slowly, "And you never told me, Martin? Why?"

He shrugged impatiently. "Because I was afraid you'd get upset. I was afraid you'd think it was important. And it wasn't."

It was important enough to tell her now, though—important enough to have turned her shy laughing Martin into a guilty, hostile stranger. . . . "But now! Why are you telling me now?"

He had forgotten that Peter had insisted on it; that was swallowed up in this new and embarrassing development. He pointed out reasonably, "If you were to turn up at the hospital suddenly like that, don't you see how it would look? It would look as though I've been trying to put something over—"

"Do you mean," she said, "do you mean—you've never told her about me, either?"

He laughed bitterly. "The first minute she was nice to me I suppose I should have warned her. 'Don't you go falling in love with me. I'm taken.' That would have marked me down as a nice chump, wouldn't it?"

Candace flushed resentfully. "All these months since, though," she suggested; but he didn't answer that. She persisted, "You'll tell her now, won't you? You'll go to her tomorrow, and tell her about me? About—us?"

Martin swore. "No." he said explosively. "Going to her, dramatically like that— Suppose she told her father? It might even cost me my appointment."

"Why? Why? Unless—" She struggled with stiff dry lips against words that hated to come, "—unless she's in love with you."

He didn't deny that she was in love with him. "She's a kid," he said. "She thinks a penniless interne is 'romantic.' In six months she'll be over it—" He sounded bitter.

She asked slowly. "And if she isn't, Martin? If she isn't? Suppose I help you to lie and cheat a little longer and she still doesn't get over it,' what then?"

He didn't answer and she thought, I'm in competition with his ambitions. He feels I'm in the way. . . . Her chin went up. "Suppose on the other hand," she said, "that I refused to be a party to deceiving someone else as I've been deceived. Suppose—that I made it no longer necessary for you to lie and cheat. That I— released you."

He had flushed a deep, angry red. "I'd have my brain examined if I wasn't glad. If I didn't feel I was lucky to be free of a jealous, nagging woman—" His foot struck savagely at a log and sent it crashing into the fire.

Candace felt as though she herself had been kicked. A dizzying wave of nausea swept over her When it had passed, she rose slowly. "How nice for you, then," she said, mocking him. "How nice! Because you're free of me. And so your career as a fashionable physician, providing this girl doesn't 'get over it,' starts much sooner, doesn't it? And it starts right at the top."

She would not allow him to accompany her, she shrank even from letting him help her on with her wrap.

And then she was alone in the hallway outside and Peter's white face was swimming up to her through a sick mist.

What To Do

Many of us lead such sedentary lives that we actually suffer from lack of exercise. Sitting at a desk all day and riding instead of walking when we go any place, has made us soft.

Lack of exercise will cause loss of vitality, awkwardness, a poor figure and many more serious ailments.

If walking doesn't appeal to you —find some other form of exercise that does. Take dancing lessons, ride horseback or swim. The "daily dozen" can be boring but there are many interesting sports or occupations that give your body needed exercise without causing mental distress.

So let's go "all out" for some form of exercise and notice the improvement in our health and state of mind.

Contributory Plan Urged For Aged Pensions

Improvements in the present Dominion old age pension plan to bring it to closer conformity with the old age benefits plan of New Zealand, are regarded as vital before the plan will prove effective in Canada, Mrs. Cora T. Casselman, M.P., Edmonton East, told a capacity audience of old age pensioners at their regular monthly general meeting at the I.O.O.F. hall, 103 street, Monday evening.

Mrs. Casselman spoke on the Social Securities act of New Zealand and stressed especially the section of the act that deals with benefits to the aged. She stated she acquired her information from Hon. Walter Nash, former minister in the New Zealand Labor cabinet and now New Zealand minister to Washington.

HOLD SING-SONG

Edward C. Fisher, president of the Alberta Pensioners' Society Incorporated, which sponsored the meeting, was chairman of the meeting. A sing-song led by W. Lee with Mrs. Robertson at the piano preceded Mrs. Casselman's address.

Mrs. Casselman stated that the Social Securities Act of New Zealand covers a wide scope, including the welfare of the aged, the widows, orphans, maternity cases, convalescents, invalids, and even mine workers.

Contribution to the fund for old age benefits is made from three sources, she stated, namely: the annual registration fee from all ever 16; a deduction of five per cent from all wages, salaries and incomes; and a government contribution into the fund out of moneys collected from other types of taxation.

Mrs. Casselman stated that some sort of contributory system must be built up in Canada before a sound system of pensions can be hoped for.

Those who qualify for the old age benefits in New Zealand must be 60 years of age; must be residents of New Zealand for at least 10 years; and must be of good character and of sober habits. The pensioner is allowed a liberal income as well, she stated.

PENSION RATES

A single person is allowed approximately $650 per year, made up of a basic pension of $300 and an earning maximum of $260. A married couple of pensionable qualifications can receive a total of $1,040 a year, Mrs. Casselman stated. The New Zealand pensioners receive further benefits because their homes, furnishings, insurance and cash holdings up to $2,500 are not used as basis for deductions, she declared.

Mrs. Casselman told the meeting that the Dominion government set up a plan for Dominion Annuities with fairly low rates several years ago. These annuities provide for those who are earning and wish to provide for their old age.

This plan is worth looking into for anyone in a position to make payments now, she declared.

LOWER AGE LIMIT

In summarizing her views on the matter of pensions in Canada, Mrs. Casselman stated she would like to see the pensionable age reduced to 60 and the rate of age increased. She also would like to see the pensioner's earning power increased and provision made for illness and invalids.

She stated that the pension plan will never be satisfactory until it is on a contributory basis, either by the recipient or the general taxpayer.

Then the people will be unable to say that the spendthrift is being paid for by the state while the thrifty one saves for his own age, she stated.

Probe Planned on Anti-War Rumors

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—(CP)—The birth, life and death of the anti-war rumor will probably be one of the major studies of the new Wartime Information Board, it was learned yesterday.

The board is expected to take over the files of a committee on research which operated under the national war services department and co-operated with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and other agencies in checking the origin of rumors apparently designed to interfere with the war effort.

The Information board headed by Charles Vining of Montreal is completing organization work under the new set-up in which it absorbs the staff of the old public information bureau.

Informed sources said there is a marked similarity between some rumors which have appeared in Canada and the broadcasts of Axis radio stations. Since rumors ignore international boundaries—at least in the innocuous—the Canadian crop is often like that of the United States.

Wendell Willkie Hopes Russia's Needs Realized

CHUNGKING, Oct. 6. — (AP) — Wendell Willkie declared last night that he hoped Joseph Stalin's statement stressing the paramount importance of a second front "will bring the Russians' imperative needs forcefully to the attention of the peoples of the United nations."

"That was the object of my public statement of my personal views in Moscow last week," Willkie said in reference to Stalin's statement that a second front is "of first rate importance."

Action is Sought To Ease City House Shortage

Importance of immediate action by Wartime Housing Ltd., to meet the serious housing shortage in Edmonton was stressed by members of the city council's housing committee at a meeting held Monday afternoon at the city hall and which was attended by E. W. Murchison, Toronto, representative of Wartime Housing Ltd.

At the opening of the meeting Mr. Murchison intimated he was attending the meeting to gather information on the seriousness of the housing situation here, the cause of the situation and what measures should be adopted to meet it. He added that Wartime Housing Ltd., was only dealing with conditions created through wartime expansion

SEEK 250 HOMES

The committee renewed its application for 250 homes to be built immediately to take care of those who were now inadequately housed, or those who did not have proper accommodation to meet the winter rigors. It was pointed out by committee members that the 250 quota now asked for was only to meet the present emergent situation.

It was pointed out that if the usual home-building program in the city was curtailed through lack of materials or labor that the demand on Wartime Housing Ltd., would have to be increased to meet the normal housing expansion in Edmonton.

Ald. H. D. Ainlay, chairman of the committee, said that time for building in western Canada was becoming exceedingly short, and that action, to be effective, must be taken immediately.

He said the housing situation in Edmonton was becoming increasingly serious, and that a considerable number of people were living in quarters which would not be tolerated but for the emergency that existed. He added that building, health and fire protection by-laws were not being enforced, because, to enforce them, would mean the turning out of people from the only refuge available to them.

CONSERVATIVE ESTIMATE

Ald. J. H. Ogilvie said that the request for 250 homes was a most conservative estimate. This number of homes would be required immediately, and should building restrictions be imposed the normal annual home-building program in Edmonton would have to be supplied by Wartime Housing Ltd.

Ald. Ogilvie said that families were now living in houses that in the ordinary course would have been condemned.

It was intimated that American officials here had indicated their willingness to erect 44 units in the Edmonton auto camp to meet in part the housing situation as it affected a section of their units.

Ald. Guy Patterson, K.C. asked if it could be determined to what extent the housing of American families had contributed to the housing shortage.

This question was asked after Mr. Murchison had intimated that Wartime Housing was concerned only with extensions made necessary through war industry expansion.

TO GIVE DECISION

Pressed by committee members to indicate whether the results of his investigation here would be communicated to the City Commissioners before leaving, Mr. Murchison said he could not do so. He added that his report would be forwarded to Toronto as soon as completed, and that he would supplement this with a verbal report on Tuesday of next week. He was of the opinion that the decision of Wartime Housing Ltd. concerning building in Edmonton would be made about October 15.

On Monday, Mr. Murchison, in company with Mayor John W. Fry, visited Edmonton's packing plants and the Aircraft Repairs Ltd., plant. He said that expansion, through war orders, was contemplated at one of the packing plants visited. The extent to which migration of families of personnel serving with American and Canadian forces here had affected the situation in Edmonton would be investigated, Mr. Murchison stated.

Reorganized Cabinet Seen During Week

By GRANT DEXTER

Edmonton Bulletin Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—Partial reorganization of the cabinet to bring Quebec representation up to the normal five portfolios is expected this week. This will mean the appointment to the cabinet of three French-Canadians.

The most important change in the cabinet, it is learned, is the elevation of Maj. Gen. L. R. LaFleche, now Deputy Minister of National War Services. The purpose is to give him a war portfolio and one only one which is said to be available is that of National War Services. Hon. J. T. Thorson, in the event of this change taking place, would be appointed forthwith to the Exchequer Court, and the vacancy thus created would be filled on Nov. 30.

CHIEF DIFFICULTY

The task of finding Maj. Gen. LaFleche a seat in Quebec is believed to be the chief difficulty in the way of immediate announcement. The desire, evidently, is to appoint Thomas Vien to the senate and run the General in Outremont—a seat with a slight majority of non-French voters. Mr. Vien, however, is reported to desire more generous treatment. His ambition, apparently, is to become leader in the senate with a seat in the cabinet. This being out of the question, a compromise is being sought. Mr. Vien, perhaps, will be satisfied with a senatorship and a Privy Councilor's rank, without membership in the ministry. Failing agreement with Mr. Vien the seat of LaFleche—Napierville, in the Montreal district, might be opened.

The other two French-Canadians to be brought into the cabinet will probably be Alphonse Fournier of Hull, as solicitor-general, and Ernest Bertrand of Laurier, Montreal, as Minister of transport. When a member of the commons is taken into the cabinet by-elections are no longer necessary. There would be at most two by-elections involved, therefore, in these changes and the government would like to bring them on at the same time as Winnipeg North Centre and Charlevoix-Saguenay, November 30.

REASON FOR DECISION

The decision to bring Maj. Gen. LaFleche into the cabinet is based, it is learned, on these considerations. Mr. King did not desire to fill the Quebec representation without having a by-election as such action would be taken in Quebec as a retreat from the issue of conscription. He feels it essential to meet the opponents of conscription in the province and fight it out. This being so, at least one of the three newcomers had to be outside the house of commons.

All new cabinet appointees, of course, will have to undertake to support the government on conscription if the present conscription law is enforced. They must be prepared to go through.

It was difficult to get an outstanding French Canadian on these terms. Two men most seriously considered, it is understood, were Brig. George Vanier, D.O.C., of the Quebec Military District, and Maj. Gen. LaFleche. The latter has the very strong support of the leaders of the church, and is generally regarded outside of Liberal party circles as the man best able to bring Quebec into line on conscription. His background, of course, is Conservative, not Liberal. He has also substantial support from prominent daily newspapers in Montreal and Toronto.

OBJECTIVE REASONS

The decision to take him in, it is emphasized, is not the result of personal considerations but is based upon purely objective reasons. There will be no change, so far as can be learned, when General LaFleche enters the Privy Council room, but there will be sincere hope that he can accomplish his appointed task in Quebec.

It is possible that Mr. King will decide not to open Mr. Thorson's seat at this time. In that event Gen. LaPleche would go to public works. But this would be a temporary arrangement. It is well understood that perhaps today, in any event sooner or later, Mr. Thorson will become Judge of the Exchequer Court.

Higher Payment For Widows is Requested Here

Immediate increase in the amounts paid to individual mothers under the Mothers' Allowances Act, such increase to be at least equal to the advance in the cost of living since 1939, was suggested Tuesday by Elmer E. Roper, M.L.A., Edmonton, in a letter to Premier William Aberhart. A copy of the letter was forwarded to the press.

Mr. Roper was elected to the Alberta legislature in the recent provincial by-election as a Co-operative Commonwealth Federation candidate.

Tuesday's letter is the second Mr. Roper has forwarded to Premier Aberhart proposing an increase in widowed mothers' allowance payments.

INCREASE GIVEN

Replying to Mr. Roper's first letter last Saturday, the premier pointed out that since assuming office the Social Credit government had increased mothers' allowances by $150,000. He also pointed out that "we usually accept the recommendation of the municipality as to the amount to be paid to the widow when all her circumstances are taken into account."

Premier Aberhart said further that "we are giving favorable consideration to every increase recommended by the municipalities."

The premier said Tuesday that he had no immediate comment to make on Mr. Roper's second letter, but indicated that it would likely receive a reply in due course.

Following is the text of Mr. Roper's second letter in full:

Thank you for your prompt reply to my letter urging that the government provide for an increase in the allowances paid to widowed mothers under The Mothers' Allowance Act. I regret, however, that your letter contained no assurance of an immediate increase.

You are correct in assuming that I was quite aware of the increase in the total annual expenditures on mothers' allowances since 1935. This total will of course continue to increase with the increase in the population of the province and in the number of persons coming under the act.

PRESENT NEED

That does not provide, however, for the present urgent need of increased allowances to individual mothers and their children who are struggling to exist on amounts which were inadequate at any time, and which have become much more so with the sharp increase in the cost of living which has taken place in the past three years. As I pointed out in my last letter, the average increase in living costs since 1939, according to Dominion government figures, is 17 per cent. The cost of food is up 30 per cent and the cost of clothing 20 per cent.

I am fully aware of the part played by municipalities in determining the amounts to be paid in individual cases. But I know also that the province has as much right to order a general increase in the amounts paid as it had in 1932 to order a reduction.

You have indicated that you would welcome a practical suggestion from me. My suggestion is that the government order an immediate increase in the amounts paid to the individual mothers, such increase to be at least equal to the advance in the cost of living since 1939. If the government is reluctant to impose an additional burden on the municipalities it can assume the total cost of the increase.

I note your suggestion that my reference to the recently announced cash surplus in the public accounts of the province may indicate that I do not quite understand the meaning of that term. That is something which we would be determined later. In the meantime I am immediately concerned about the very apparent lack of cash or any other kind of surplus in the homes of the widowed mothers and their children who are dependent of The Mothers' Allowance Act.

I would appreciate assurance from you that an increase in the allowances will be ordered immediately. The government can be assured of any support I can give in justifying the moderate extra expenditure which such an increase would involve.

$30,000 Damage in Prison Camp Blaze

CALGARY, Oct. 6.—(CP)—Damage unofficially estimated at $30,000 was done last night in a spectacular blaze which razed the main mess hall at a new prisoner-of-war camp somewhere in southern Alberta and threatened to set the whole $1,750,000 establishment ablaze before it was brought under control. There were no prisoners in the camp.

It was reported no supply of water was available to fight the fire and the complete fire department from a nearby centre was forced to stand by and wait for the fire to burn itself out.

Of unknown origin, the fire broke out at 10:30 p.m. and was so far advanced in the frame structure by the time the call was received and firemen reached the location that chemical extinguishers were useless.
